Harvard and Cornell started after each other in the Stadium this afternoon, Harvard to get some good practice for the last two games of its schedule, while Cornell went into the struggle to atone in a degree at least for its defeat at the hands of the Crimson last Fall, 18 to 0.

Cornell was greatly outweighed, and while it could not hope to make any headway through the giant Harvard forwards, the Ithacan eleven came to Cambridge with a goodly stock of puzzling trick formations and a fair working knowledge of the strictly open style of play, by the use of which they hoped to at least to score on the Crimson, for the lack of weight in their line precluded much hope of stopping the Crimson advances to the Cornell goal line.

Harvard went into the game with practically a first string eleven, while Cornell started after its rivals with the best eleven it could get together for the occasion. The Ithacans placed their hopes for a score mainly on Pitcher, their consistent drop kicker, whom they intended to shove into the line-up should they come within scoring distance, while in the main the Crimson was prepared to rely mainly on straight football for its gains.

BROTHERS FIELD, Andover, Nov. 5.—With the mud and water nearly ankle deep the rival Phillips Exeter and Phillips Andover elevens opened their great annual game before a cheering crowd estimated at more than 15,000, here this afternoon.

The threatening weather conditions had little effect on the rooters, every seat in the grandstand and bleachers being sold long before the hour for the start of the game arrived.

Both elevens came on to the gridiron a full half hour before the time for beginning hostilities so as to get themselves accustomed to the slippery field.

The Exeter supporters based their hopes chiefly on the ability of Charley Brickley. With this great back in proper form Exeter was confident that they would be able to keep the heavy Andover team on the defensive for the greater part of the game.

Throughout the practice Mahan, Andover's great back, kept reeling off punts for an average of fifty-five yards. Ably backed by Captain Rogers and "Dudie" Sawyer, Andover has a wonderful trio of backfield men.

When the referee blew his whistle starting this great academic struggle, both elevens went at each other chock full of confidence and ready to extend every ounce of strength in order to bring home a victory to their alma mater.

CENTRAL PARK, Waltham, Nov. 5.—More than 10,000 people were packed in Central Park this afternoon when the rival Somerville High and Waltham elevens marched on the field and put the ball in play.

The Somerville delegation over 3,000 strong arrived in town shortly before 2 o'clock in special trains, and without any unnecessary delay got out to the grounds to see the two elevens run through their preliminary practice.

The Red and Blue team by reason of its great weight ruled a slight favorite. The odds quoted before the game were 10 to 9 in favor of Somerville, but many of the wise ones backed Waltham to the limit.

Waltham has had success in every game so far this season, with the exception of the Cambridge Latin game last Saturday when the "Cantabs" forced the Watch City eleven to play a scoreless tie.

On the other hand the Somerville team has played a consistent article of football all season. Somerville has been defeated twice, however, Coach White's proteges fallin before both Malden and Groton.

The Waltham team went into the fray with the "do or die" spirit, all intent on wiping out that 22 to 0 defeat of last season.

The Somerville backfield was given more than an ordinary amount of attention by the Waltham fans, who feared that the terrific rushes and speed of Bob Garland, Jack Dardis, Parks and Doane would prove too much for their team.

MONUMENT TO SWEET PLANNED

The executive committee of the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. L., has formulated plans to erect a monument over the grave in Forest Hills Cemetery of Philip H. Sweet, formerly treasurer of the Boston Central Labor Union, president of the Boston Cooper's Union, and president of the State Federation. Mr. Sweet died two weeks ago in Providence. The committee voted $50 as a nucleus of a fund to build the monument and appointed Dennis D. Driscoll, M. D. Collins and M. T. Joyce custodians of subscriptions. An appeal will be made to labor men throughout the State to further the project.

REPUBLICANS WILL GIVE NO FORECAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Republican National Congressional Committee will make no forecast of the election results this year. Representative William B. McKinley, the chairman of the committee, was asked for a prediction of the result at his office in Chicago by the National News Association to-day. He referred the inquiry to Representative Loudenslager, the secretary of the committee at the New York office of the committee. Secretary Loudenslager said: "We will give out no forecast of the result of congressional elections this year. Heretofore when we made one it has been given publicity on the Thursday preceeding election day. This year, however, we have decided to omit it."

B. & M. MAN SHOOTS SELF

Charles A. Messer, of No. 10 Avon street, Wakefield, assistant superintendent of the Portland division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, who was recently left a fortune by his father, shot himself twice in the head early to-day at his home. It is believed he will recover. Mr. Messer is said to have been in poor health. His wife heard two shots and found her husband bleeding. Though the bullets entered the right temple they did not penetrate the brain.

STIMSON BY 90,000, PREDICTS GRISCOM

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Lloyd C. Griscom, chairman of the Republican Committee of New York, admitted to-day that John A. Dix, the Democratic candidate for Governor, would carry New York city by between 70,000 and 75,000 plurality. Chairman Griscom supplemented this prediction, however, with the statement that from all the advices received by him Henry L. Stimson, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, would carry the entire State by 90,000 plurality.

KILLS TWO CHILDREN.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 5.—Nelson French shot to death his two children, Doris and Reta, aged nine and eleven, today, as they slept, and then fatally shot himself. It is believed his mind was unbalanced from overwork.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 5.—Yale and Brown had a crowd of nearly 10,000 people on hand for their football game this afternoon, which closed Yale's matches in preparation for the Princeton and Harvard contests.

Yale field was in wretched condition for the game because of the three days' rain, which left it soft and heavy, and the football management moaned that the playing on the field to-day will make it impossible to get the gridiron into shape again before the Yale-Harvard game in just two weeks.

Yale was obliged to begin the game without the presence of its stars, Captain Daly, Kilpatrick and Paul, who are all suffering from slight injuries, being in uniform on the side lines, but not sent into the play at the start.

Yale has never been beaten by Brown, but has twice been tied, the last time being two years ago, when a 10 to 10 score resulted. Last year Yale won handily, 23 to 0.

Two new players were to-day for Yale, Savage at right tackle and Strout at quarterback. They are novices and their winning places for the series against Harvard and Princeton depends on their showing to-day.

The Brown eleven came here this noon hopeful and in splendid condition. It went to Hartford yesterday and practiced on Trinity Field. McKay, High and Sprackling were looked to for long runs around end and on forward passes.

DRANK WOOD ALCOHOL.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Three Italians were brought to the Nassau Hospital to-day from a boarding house on Jackson avenue, suffering from the effects of wood alcohol, which they drank for whiskey. One died in the ambulance while being taken to the hospital and another died soon after reaching the emergency room.

Mitten and Walker	1146	6
Jokus and Schiller	1146	5

With the end of the six days' bicycle race only ten hours away, and five teams still tied for first place, the bikers started out at a fast pace this afternoon for the final day of racing.

When Kramer and Fogler announced Wednesday night that there would not be a ten-team tie on Saturday they evidently knew what they were talking about. The cleverest of team work has put the leaders where they are, and although those who are a lap behind will struggle gamely to win back the lost distance, none really believes that they can do it with such men as Moran, Kramer, Al Goulette, Fogler, Collins and the others who are now setting the pace.

Although the Jokus-Schiller combination did some remarkably fine work yesterday they cannot possibly hope to overcome the present lead.

From the time the gun was fired this afternoon, until the men are called from the track at 10:30 o'clock to-night, there will not be a dull moment.

In fact, as soon as the starting signal was given, the riders started out in a whirlwind fashion that will make or break some of them before night. The average milage an hour up to to-day was about twenty-two miles.

To-day the men are riding thirty miles an hour, and keeping it up. They are watchful, too. All are afraid that something is in the air and liable to drop at any moment. There is an atmosphere of nervousness all over the course.

The man who can steal a lap on any of the leaders to-day will have to do forty miles an hour, and even then may not succeed. The riders are on the lookout for tricks and combinations, so apt to come at the last moment.

The hard strain will come during the later hours, and the most exciting finish ever seen at a six-day event is expected this evening.

2 APPOINTEES TURNED DOWN

Notice was received at the office of Mayor Fitzgerald to-day of the rejection of two of his appointees by the Civil Service Commission. No reasons were assigned by the commission for the rejections. To-day was the last day of the thirty days confirmatory period in both cases, and had the commission not notified the Mayor, the two rejections would have made automatically by midnight to-night.

The two rejected are Felix J. McGettrick, the Mayor's appointee to the office of penal commissioner, at $5,000 a year, and Philip Sondheim to the Children's Institute trusteeship, which carries no salary.

This is the second time in five month that former Assistant District Attorney McGettrick has been turned down. The previous rejection he suffered was when he was appointed to the principal assessorship with a salary of $4,000.

WAR VETERAN HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Charles H. Twist, a Civil War veteran, who lives on Brown street, Peabody, was held in $5,000 for a hearing on Tuesday on a manslaughter charge by Judge Bosson in the Chelsea Police Court to-day, it being charged that he is responsible for the death of Sylvester McNally of Lynn, another veteran. The police say that on the night of September 13 last there were a number of voters on Broadway, near Carroll street, in Chelsea, and that while McNally was waiting for a car Twist came up and knocked him down without provocation.

FOSS WAVE ROLLS OVER THE STATE

As the Massachusetts political campaign practically closes with to-night's rallies, the indications are, as indicated by the feeling manifested in all sections of the State, that Congressman Eugene N. Foss will be elected Governor by another such landslide as swept William L. Douglas into the gubernatorial chair by more than 35,000 votes.

WILLCUTT HURLS POLITICAL BOMB AT REPUBLICANS.

Investigations made in various parts of the State indicate that hundreds and thousands of Republicans who voted last year for Draper are going to switch this year to Foss, while it has been found that practically all of the Valley vote of last year will also stick to the Democratic candidate.

A political bomb was hurled into the ranks of the Republican party to-day by William B. Willcutt, a Boston Republican State committeeman, who resigned from the committee and came out for Foss. He says that this election in Massachusetts is not a question of Foss or Draper, but that the defeat of the Republican ticket is necessary as a rebuke to Republican rapacity.

This feeling in the Republican party as indicated by the action of Mr. Willcutt is also shown by a demand upon the part of Congressman Butler Ames, who in a letter to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge demands that he get out of the race for Senator if the party is to be saved in this State. The bossism of Lodge, Congressman Ames declared, has jeopardized the entire Republican State ticket.

Colonel William A. Gaston, who was reported to be in favor of Draper for governor, came out in a letter to-day in which he declared that he proposed to vote the full Democratic ticket as a protest against the high cost of living for which he holds the Republican party mainly responsible.

The Democrats have eight big rallies on in Boston to-night, their local orators being reinforced by Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, Governor-elect Fred W. Plaisted and Congressmen-elect Daniel J. McGillicuddy and Samuel W. Gould of Maine.

The Republicans make their great stand to-night at Tremont Temple, where the speakers schedules are Governor Draper, Senator Lodge, Former Governor Guild and others.

31 RESCUED FROM DEATH IN HURRICANE

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—With Captain Johnson and his crew of thirty on board rescued from the wrecked British steamship Crown Prince in Corrientes Bay, Cuba, in the recent hurricane, the steamship Esperanza of the Ward line arrived here to-day. Hope had practically been abandoned by the crew as huge waves rolled over the helpless vessel in the bay. With the aid of glasses, the Crown Prince could be seen with distress signals showing. Notwithstanding the danger that attended such an undertaking a vessel was put out by a Cuban official and after nearly foundering several times reached the Crown Prince. The men clinging to ropes slid to the deck of the rescuing vessel.

RABBI IS LOVE CASE WITNESS

Rabbi Charles Fleischer, pastor of Temple Adath Israel, who was called as a witness in the Love divorce case, was to-day examined in private, his testimony being taken in the Judge's lobby upstairs previous to the opening of the trial in the divorce court.

Dr. Fleischer was examined by Attorney Schwarzenberg of counsel for Mr. Love. Judge Pierce, Mrs. Love and her lawyer and Attorney Schwarzenberg were the only ones present during the examination.

Attorney Schwarzenberg said that Dr. Fleischer's testimony corroborated that in regard to the trip to New York aboard the steamer Harvard.

Nerve Specialist Examined.

After the private session, court opened in the regular courtroom. Dr. George L. Walton, a nerve specialist, was called by Attorney Bradbury for Mrs. Love, the doctor's testimony being in rebuttal. He was asked:

Q.—Did you examine Mrs. Love last June? A.—Yes. At her request I spent an hour and a half in investigating her physical and mental condition. Her physical condition was excelent. She was perfectly healthy and normal. Mentally she was alert and showed no signs of any disorder.

Q.—Did you know the purpose of the examination? A.—Yes, she told me that a libel had been filed against her, charging gross and confirmed habits of intoxication. She wanted this examination for use in the case.

Q.—Did you detect any traces of the use of liquor or the use of drugs? A.—None.

Q.—Would there have been certain well defined symptoms if she had been a regular drinker for twenty years? A.—Yes.

Found No Trace of Drugs.

Q.—Would phenacetin, acetanelid morphine and such drugs have left plain traces? A.—Yes, but I found no traces of their use.

The witness was then cross-examined by Attorney Ford:

Q.—Would a three month's abstention from the use of liquor or drugs just previous to the examination have removed the traces of their use? A.—Yes, in most cases.

Q.—Assuming that for one month previously she had abstained, could you have detected the traces of their use? A.—Cases differ, but it is doubtful whether any traces would remain.

Q.—Did Mrs. Love tell you that she had been a regular drinker for years? A.—Yes, she said that she had had liquor in the house which she used for a tonic and as a medicine and that she often drank at the club also. She said that she used to drink a bottle of beer at 11 o'clock and at 5 o'clock and that she drank wine in company. She said that otherwise, except for a period a year ago when Mr. Love was much away from home and she drank to drown her troubles, she had not drunk to excess. She said that during the last year she had not drunk at all except on one or two occasions, once when her mother died last December.

Said Nothing of Strychnine.

Q.—Did she say anything about an overdose of strychnine? A.—No, she did not.

Miss Maria Blanch MacCallum, once a domestic in the Love home, was the next witness.

Q.—Did you ever see Mrs. Love intoxicated? A.—Not in any degree.

Q.—Do you recall a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Love over a letter? A.—Yes. One morning I heard them in Mrs. Love's room. Mr. Love was demanding that she give him some letter. She ran out into the kitchen and begged me to protect her. I called for Mrs. Aldrich, but she was not dressed and did not come down.

Mrs. Love handed me a black leather handbag and I stuck it in a clothes basket. Then Mr. Love came in and asked if I had it. I said no and he went in and searched my room. When Mrs. Love and I went into Mrs. Love's room, one drawer had been wrenched open and the lock broken off. When Mr. Love left the house a moment later I heard him say, "The letter was left for bait and Mrs. Love has nibbled."

Q.—Was liquor served at meals in the Love home? A.—Yes, beer in the evening always and sometimes cocktails which Mr. Love mixed.

Mr. Ford then cross-examined:

Q.—At the time of Mrs. Love's illness last Spring did you tell Dr. Gannett and Dr. Woods or Mr. Love that Mrs. Love drank about a pint of whiskey some days? A.—I can't say.

FEAR VESSELS LOST IN STORM

Tales of terrific seas caused by the gale were brought to port to-day by vessels that had weathered the storm. The gale did considerable damage to shipping all along the coast. Captains of incoming vessels express the fear that more than one craft was lost in the gale.

The heavy rain relieved the big drought which has been causing great anxiety in many towns and cities in New England. Many water supplies were about dry. The rainfall amounted to nearly two inches and streams that were dry are rushing torrents of water to-day.

All along the coast a terrific surf is pounding the shore. Damage has been done to small craft and by an unusually high tide. The heaviest rainfall was at Block Island, where 3.76 inches fell, and there was a wind velocity of fifty-six miles an hour.

Driving rain storms prevailed all over New England. In the Central States a heavy snow storm impeded train travel, caused several wrecks and a tangle of wires which crippled the telephone and telegraph service.

Pennsylvania in spots was under twenty-one inches of snow, while in Binghamton, N. Y., a blanket of white lay eighteen inches deep.

Fair and cooler is the prediction for to-morrow.

HOWE MEMORIAL SERVICE SUNDAY

Memorial services will be held at the Second Church, Copley square, to-morrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock to Mrs. Julia Ward Howe. The services will be conducted under the auspices of the Women's Ministerial Conference, which was founded by Mrs. Howe, and of which she was president at the time of her death.

The Rev. Florence Kollock Crooker, the first vice-president, will preside. The Rev. Ada C. Bowles of Gloucester, will speak on "Mrs. Howe, the Preacher," and the Rev. Mary Leggett of Revere, on "Mrs. Howe, the Reformer." The Rev. Nellie Mann Opdale of Marlboro will read a poem written by Mrs. Howe for the conference several years ago.

WANT ARCHITECTS TO PLAN SLEEP PORCHES

The Boston Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis has appealed through a letter to architects for help to eliminate the great white plague by calling to the attention of home builders the health possibilities of sleeping porches, balconies and roof spaces. It has asked them to persuade store owners to provide open-air accommodation for noon luncheon and recreation. Flat roofs, it is urged, could be easily made available at little expense. The roofs of school buildings should also be utilized for teaching and play, it is urged.

ELEVATED APPEALS.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company to-day appealed from the decision of the Boston Transit Commission locating the stations on the proposed Riverbank Subway at Massachusetts avenue, Dartmouth street and Charles street, and asks the Railroad Commissioners to determine the number and location of the stations, if any.

RIOTS FEARED IN BARCELONA

MADRID, Nov. 5.—The Government announces that it will prevent at all hazards a monster labor manifestation arranged for to-day at Barcelona, to which city the strikers at Sabadell have declared that they will march. Already union strikers in Barcelona have fired upon non-union workmen.

General Weyler, Captain General of Catalonia, has a big force of troops at his command, but these will be reinforced by 15,000. The Government declares that the revolutionary leaders, many of whom have been imprisoned, are trying to inflame the masses of the workmen.

The decision of the strikers at Sabadell to march to Barcelona leads to the fear that if it is carried out there will be collisions between the workmen and the troops. It is likely that such an outcome would be followed by the declaration of a general strike in Barcelona and possibly in Catalonia.

The general strike at Sabadell is assuming a dangerous character. At a meeting of strikers, at which inflammatory speeches were made, it was voted to march on Barcelona.

Anarchistic literature urging a revolution is being distributed throughout Barcelona province. Many arrests have been made.

EXPRESS STRIKERS REJECT ULTIMATUM

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—"We will take all the strikers back and advance their wages, but under no circumstances will we recognize their union." This ultimatum was served on representatives of the express drivers' unions to-day. William H. Ashton and Valentine Hogeran, representing the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, retorted that there could be no settlement of the strike on that basis. A riot took place at Fifty-first street and Broadway when non-union drivers were assailed by a mob. The drivers were finally rescued.

AMATEUR TO TRY FOR HEARST PRIZE

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 5.—Julius W. Schubert, a local mechanician, is building an aeroplane in which he will attempt to fly from San Francisco to New York for the Hearst prize. Schubert has had his aeroplane, which is to be named San Jose, under construction for some weeks. He has not as yet selected a route. He will engage in several practice flights in the Sacramento valley before trying for the big prize. The machine will be equipped with three propellers.

ROBBERS FLEE, LEAVING LOOT

THETFORD, Vt., Nov. 5.—Robbers made a raid through southeastern Orange County last night and early to-day, and broke into the postoffices at Thetford Centre and West Fairlie. They were fired upon by Sherman Rogers, a mail carrier, as they were making their escape.

The robbers reached Thetford shortly before midnight, and, entering a small store, blew open the safe. They found it empty.

The next break was at West Fairlie, where the store of Milo Kelser was entered and the postoffice safe blown open. The robbers took $200 in stamps and cash, but the noise had awakened the inhabitants and the fire alarm was sounded.

The robbers jumped into a wagon and went toward South Fairlie, but the surrounding country had been aroused. Later they encountered Rogers, armed with a shotgun. Rogers fired two charges at them only to see them leap from their wagon and dash into the woods, leaving behind all their plunder.

BRIG.-GEN. DIXON, WAR HERO, DEAD

Brigadier-General Adam Dixon, eighty-four years old, who rendered the Union distinguished service during four years in the Civil War, receiving a medal from Congress for capturing, unaided, nine Confederate soldiers, died in the Whidden Memorial Hospital, Everett, from injuries sustained when he was struck by an electric car at Everett last Monday. He was in the thick of twenty-seven engagements in the Civil War, coming out of every one without a scratch. Up to the time of the accident he was in robust health and was a devoted pedestrian.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

Extra Guard for Czar and Kaiser in Woods.

BERLIN.—An anonymous writing sent to the chief of police of Berlin led to a thorough search of the new imperial game preserve at Oranienburg before Emperor William and his royal guest, Czar Nicholas of Russia, started a day's hunting there to-day. Hundreds of soldiers and foresters beat upon nearly 2,000 deer and hare which were driven past platforms upon which the royal party of twenty-four sat. The Czar was given the first shot. Soldiers were secreted for the protection of the party.

Fliers to Study Planets.

BERLIN.—Dr. Archenhold probably will be the first astronomer to utilize the aeroplane in viewing the celestial bodies. Dr. Archenhold, the inventor of the world's most powerful telescope, makes a specialty of studying the moon at the observatory at Treptow, Pomerania. He is about to go to Central Africa to conduct a series of observations, and he will take with him a Wright biplane—probably because one made the world's record in a flight for altitude—and a Wright pilot to run it. Ascending to great elevation, Dr. Archenhold hopes to make important astronomical discovereles.

Boy Shoots Himself in Theatre.

GENOA.—In the midst of a performance of an operetta at the Verdi Theatre last night a student named Ozzove shot himself in his place in the gallery. The shot caused a panic, in the course of which women fainted, though no more serious consequences to innocent parties are reported. Ozzove, who is a youth of nineteen, was taken to a hospital, where he confessed that he tried to commit suicide because he had been disappointed in love. He will recover.

Lisbon Plague Report Not Proven

LISBON.—The report that there is plague in the port of Lisbon, which was widely circulated and caused a scare, has so far not been proved authentic. The surgeon of the United States cruiser Des Moines, now lying in the harbor, thoroughly investigated the rumor, and found that the only basis for it is that three longshoremen had been quarantined.

New German Shell Is Terrific.

LONDON.—The weekly journal Engineering asserts that Germany has long been making guns that beat the British 13.5 guns. These guns, the paper says, are likely to be placed on the warships now being built. Germany is also introducing a new explosive shell of unprecedented power. Tests with the shell have shown devastating results.

Guerra's Condition a Question.

HAVANA.—Police Lieutenant Perez, at whose house Fernandez, the policeman who shot General Pino Guerra, was living, and who disappeared October 26, is still missing. It is supposed that he embarked on a vessel bound for Spain. Guerra's surgeon reports that his condition is improved, but friends still say that the General is worse.

Portuguese Friars Excluded.

LISBON.—Argentina and Brazil have notified Portugal that they refuse to harbor any more friars or other members of religious bodies expelled from Portugal, declaring they are a menace to public order and tranquillity.

Potash Situation Acute.

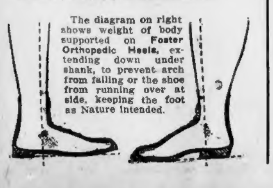
BERLIN.—The potash negotiations have reached an acute stage. If no satisfactory reply is received at once the Americans interested will leave. They have been seven weeks in Berlin and will stay no longer.

Bomb Wrecks, but Does Not Kill.

CATANIA.—Although a bomb, exploded in front of the Society of Civil Servants, killed no one, the neighboring buildings suffered more or less serious damage.

These diagrams show the relation of the leg and foot to the bearing point of "ordinary heels" and Foster Orthopedic Heels.

Dotted line through diagram on the left—with ordinary heel—shows how weight of body tends to break down shank of foot, crowding the heel to rear, leaving arch unsupported, causing pain and discomfort.



The diagram on right shows weight of body supported on Foster Orthopedic Heels, extending down under shank, to prevent arch from falling or the shoe from running over at side, keeping the foot as Nature intended.

Why do you unconsciously stand first upon one foot and then upon the other?

Why are your feet and legs so beastly tired when you get home at night?

Why are they almost equally tired when you arise in the morning?

Why do you have those pains in your heels, in your instep—on the balls of your feet just back of the toes—in your heels—in the calves of your legs—in your thighs—in the region of your spine?

Here's the answer—because the heels of your shoes do not properly support the weight of your body.

FOSTER

Orthopedic Rubber Heels

Do more than ordinary rubber heels—simply relieve the jar to the nervous system. They extend down under the shank of your shoe, thus properly supporting the arch, makes a firm, even tread, prevents the arch of the foot from falling and the friction plug—a feature possessed by no other rubber heel—positively prevents slipping.

It's difficult to find a school teacher, nurse, traveling salesman, floor walker, clerk, railroad or street-car conductor, motorman, policeman or letter carrier, or a person who is above normal weight, no matter what his profession or station in society, who is not a sufferer from some one or more of the painful and distressing symptoms of flat-foot.

Ask your shoe dealer for Foster Orthopedic Rubber Heels.

Have a pair put on your shoes and see how much easier you can walk, how much better you feel. No more tired feet or pain in the ankles, legs or back. Your troubles will disappear like magic.

Made in Men's and Women's sizes. 75c per pair put on. By mail 50c per pair. (Give outline of heel.)

One Effect of Automobiling.

It is now generally recognized that more men and women are becoming bald today than ever before, and the cause is automobiling. They stir up a terrible lot of dust, and in this dust are all sorts of microbes and germs. These settle upon the hair and take lodgment in the scalp, thus setting up a diseased condition that works its way down to the hair roots. Then the hair begins to fall out. There is only one remedy, and that is frequent washing with Birt's Head Wash. Ordinary soaps and shampoos are positively injurious, because they contain an excess of alkali, and alkali has a deadly effect on the hair. Birt's Head Wash is made of neutral soap, scientifically combined with Glycerin, White of Eggs, Cocoanut Oil and a small quantity of Salicylic Acid, to destroy germs and remove disagreeable odors. Sold by drug and department stores, 25c. a tube, jars, 50c.

ITALY FORBIDS SATIRE ON KATHERINE ELKINS

An operetta by an anonymous composer and librettist and based on the Abruzzi-Elkins romance has aroused the interest of two continents because of the efforts made to suppress it. The Italian Government has just forbidden its production in Italy, and Senator Stephen B. Elkins has used every means at his command to prevent its production in the United States. The American gives below the scenario of the operetta.

Special Cable to Boston American.

ROME, Nov. 5.—The Italian Government has refused to permit the production in Italy of "The Beautiful Miss," an operetta which is said to be founded on the romance of Miss Katherine Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi, and it will have its first presentation in New York. So harshly has the author of the libretto dealt with the American girl, who is the heroine and who is depicted as a tireless title-hunter, that the Italian Foreign Office placed its ban on the operetta lest it should offend American sensibilities. Both the author and the composer, the latter a noted musician, have refused to allow their names to be made public, fearing legal proceedings.

The operetta is in a prologue and three acts. The scene of the prologue is laid in New York. The characters in it are Miss Walkins, the most beautiful of American girls; the Duke of Mirafella and Lieutenant Evans of the United States Navy. Miss Walkins and the lieutenant are in love and are very happy. During their duet, declaring their love to each other, the chorus announces the arrival of a foreign warship, and the Duke, rich, handsome and covered with gold lace and glittering orders, comes ashore.

Pursues Him in Europe.

New York society promptly goes wild over him. He is dined and feted everywhere. Miss Walkins, her eyes dazzled by his title, uses every means at her command to meet him, but without success. Meanwhile she temporizes with the lieutenant and tells him that she still loves him.

When the first act opens the Duke has left America. Miss Walkins, despite all her efforts, has not met him, but her determination to do so is still strong. She is wealthy, so she starts for Europe in pursuit of him. She misses him in London and races to Brussels, from Brussels to Milan, and from Milan to Paris, the title always the will-o'-the-wisp that lures her on. At last in Paris her ambition is realized and she is presented to the Duke at a ball.

She employs all her charms, all her allurements, to captivate him, and succeeds. He becomes infatuated with her and they declare their love for each other in a duet (soprano and tenor). Then comes the one dramatic scene in the operetta. In the midst of the duet the lieutenant enters. He has heard that she has crossed the ocean in pursuit of the Duke and his title and has followed. There is a quarrel, the naval officer insults the Duke and they fight, but no blood is shed. The Duke leaves and Miss Walkins, although still determined to capture the title, placates the lieutenant, promises to return to him and renews their engagement.

Renounces Throne for Bride.

The scene of the second act, like that of the first, is in Paris. The Duke wishes to marry Miss Walkins, and she is determined to marry him, but the obstacles seem insurmountable. The Duke's family is adamant. They threaten to cast him off unless he abandons the idea. Great events are also happening to complicate the situation. The Duke is about to be proclaimed king of a little eastern state, but his future subjects want "a real queen, not an American one." His family and the envoys prevail upon the Duke to give up his love affair, and Miss Walkins receives a letter from him renouncing her forever.

It is a terrible blow to her ambition, and she becomes ill. The disappointment makes her mother ill also. They are both in critical condition, and the Duke is informed. He flies to Paris, and when he sees Miss Walkins again he realizes that he loves her and that she is more to him than any kingdom. He renounces the throne and declares he will marry her. The closing scene of this act is by the Duke, Miss Walkins and the envoys of the Oriental state whom the Duke sends back to their country with his refusal.

The third act opens with tales of plots and conspiracies against the Duke and Miss Walkins. The Oriental State is offended because its envoys have been brusquely treated by the Duke. It intends to punish him by abducting Miss Walkins. The Duke's family also has a little private plot directed against her life.

Married on a Mountain.

Although appalled by these dangers, Miss Walkins has no idea of relinquishing her hold on the title so nearly won. With the Duke she leaves for an unknown country where, on the summit of a lofty mountain, they are married. In spite of their isolation the news of the marriage is spread over the world. The love of the young couple disarms the Duke's family and also the Government of the Eastern State, and word is sent to them to come home and be forgiven.

The final tableau represents the triumphal entry of the Duke, now king of the Eastern State, into his capital. By his side is his American queen, her ambition realized and her pride gratified. But there is one drawback to her happiness. At the official reception held by the king and queen the officer designated to represent the United States and convey its greetings to the new rulers is Lieutenant Evans, the deserted fiance.

NEW HAVEN WELCOME FOR GREAT "MACBETH"

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5.—Sothern and Marlowe's "Macbeth" received its premiere here last night at the Hyperion Theatre before a brilliant audience. The production ranks as the most elaborate and important ever given of Shakespeare in this country and is the result of two years' study by Sothern and Marlowe and the expenditure of a fortune by them in its presentation. At the conclusion of the play both stars were waited upon by representatives of the faculty of Yale, who in impromptu speeches expressed thanks to them in behalf of the public for the immense amount of good in arranging so scholarly a production.

HUSBAND DIVORCES EDNA M'CLURE

RENO, Nev., Nov. 5.—The final chapter in the story of the hasty marriage of Edna McClure, the Broadway chorus girl and intimate friend of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, was closed here by the granting of a divorce to John G. Richardson, her husband, upon the ground of desertion. He is the son of J. Herbert Richardson, now living in Belmont, Mass. In his complaint he alleged that his wife deserted him in August, 1909. Upon this charge, with a stipulation that he shall pay her permanent alimony of $50 a month, the decree was granted.

MARY GARDEN BRIDE OF BEY?

PARIS, Nov. 5.—If Mary Garden was married before she returned to America, her husband probably was an Englishman of baronial family in the service of the Egyptian government, and bearing the title of Bey.

Many letters have come to Miss Garden's apartments since her departure, addressed to James Bey. There is only one person with the family name of James who possesses the right to annex this Turkish title to it. This person is well-known in many Paris hotels. He is said to be an Englishman of high birth, who is, or has been an important officer of the Egyptian government.

WILL SUE EX-HUSBAND FOR MARRYING AGAIN

BROCKTON, Nov. 5.—Within a few hours after she had resumed her maiden name of Cora B. Newton, following the expiration of the interlocutory period of six months after she had been granted a divorce from Malcolm E. Wallace, Miss Newton announced that she intended to proceed against her former husband, who she alleges married Miss Elizabeth F. Beal, the ceremony being performed by Rev. George E. Soper of Nashua, N. H., October 5. She declares that her former husband has no right to marry for two years. She saw a printed notice of the marriage and then conferred with counsel.

Mrs. Agnes Porter of No. 67 Pearl street, Lynn, reported to the police that a case of silverware had been stolen from her house and later told them she had found it in the house of a neighbor. A short time ago she gave a party, and it was the following day that the silverware was missed. She happened to call on a friend and found the property there. Mrs. Porter said the friend had given up the property and she did not care to prosecute.

DR. CRIPPEN TO DIE TUESDAY

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Dr. H. H. Crippen's appeal from the verdict of guilty rendered against him when he was tried for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore Crippen, was dismissed to-day, and the death sentence was reaffirmed in the high court of criminal appeals.

The American's last hope for freedom was doomed when the appeal judges refused to grant him another trial. Crippen will be hanged on Tuesday.

The prisoner took this blow very hard. His face turned ghastly white, and he trembled in his chair. Those who looked on thought he was going to faint.

Barrister Alfred Tobin, who actively conducted the defence for the little American at the murder trial, was chief counsel at the hearing on the appeal. He based his chief argument upon the incident of a juror's illness, although he rounded out his plea by declaring that Crippen had been convicted on presumptive evidence.

Quotes Medical Experts.

Mr. Tobin asked the judges to consider whether it had been properly established that the mark on a piece of flesh, produced in evidence at the trial as a portion of Belle Elmore's body had a scar. The prosecution contended it was the scar from an operation, thus using the claim as a link in their contention that the remains found in the cellar of Crippen's home were really those of Mrs. Crippen. Tobin contended the mark had been made by folding the skin. He quoted the medical experts whose opinions differed and called attention to the "grave conflict of opinion."

"The remains were never sufficiently identified," said Mr. Tobin. "It was never established that they were the remains of a female, much less of Belle Elmore Crippen. I fought this evidence throughout the trial and was amazed when Chief Justice Alverstone said it had not been seriously disputed by the defence."

Testimony "Irregular."

Tobin said that the testimony of a furnishing store clerk, proving that Crippen had purchased pajamas, part of which were found with the remains in the cellar was introduced after all the other witnesses, including Crippen himself, had been examined and cross-examined. Mr. Tobin contended that this was irregular because the cross-examination had been directed, up to that time, to prove the remains had been buried long before February 1, and there was no way of refuting the clerk's evidence. Crippen's lawyer said that "this most damning evidence against the American" had been strongly used by the Chief Justice in summing up the case and instructing the jury.

Dr. Crippen was apparently confident of success, for he was cheerful and looked in good physical condition as he was conducted from the Pentonville prison to the detention room in the courthouse adjoining the room in which his arguments were to be heard.

One point of Crippen's case concerned the refusal of Justice Radley to allow Crippen to hear the arguments of his counsel in person. However, the dapper little American doctor was conveyed within the precincts of the court in the event that a decision in his favor would be granted.

Court Room Crowded.

Dr. Crippen was as dandified as ever in his fancy frock coat and stylishly cut trousers. He wore spats and patent leather shoes.

The condemned man had not been seated very long in the detention room before his lawyer entered with a triumphant look on his face and told him the court had ruled that he could sit in court and hear the arguments.

Crippen rose with alacrity, and accompanied by two warders entered the courtroom.

Justices Darling and Pickford sat upon the bench, and they evidenced a keen interest in the prisoner as he tripped into the courtroom.

Anticipating something new in the legal line the courtroom was nearly filled with lawyers, who listened intently to the points as they were checked off. Crippen took his seat, placed his hand behind his ear and settled down to take in the proceedings with all the intentness of a man whose life depended upon their outcome.

HURT AT COUNTRY CLUB.

An employe of the Belmont Spring Country Club, while riding on a mowing machine to-day, fell from his seat. He sustained cuts on the head, arms and legs. He was taken to the Waltham Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate his right leg. He is in a critical condition.

REDMOND SAILS FOR HOME HAPPY

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Hon. John E. Redmond, the Irish parliamentary leader, and Mrs. Redmond, sailed to-day for Ireland on the White Star liner Celtic. Already great preparations are being made to welcome Mr. Redmond back. He will resume his parliamentary duties at Westminster on November 15, when the House of Commons reassembles for an Autumn session.

Mr. Redmond had been in this country for the past five weeks and in that time addressed nearly thirty meetings, in all the large centres from the Atlantic coast to St. Louis. Two of his colleagues, who accompanied him to this country, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, are still pushing their work forward, Mr. Devlin in the South and Mr. Boyle in the West.

The fourth member of the delegation, T. P. O'Connor, having completed a tour of all the large Canadian cities, sailed yesterday from Quebec for England.

"The mission which I have just concluded and in which two of my colleagues, Mr. Devlin and Mr. Boyle, are still engaged, is the most successful which has ever been undertaken by any Irish representatives in this country in connection with the national movement," said Mr. Redmond.

"I could not exaggerate the importance I attach to that success at this time because of the great influence it is certain to have on the developments of the next few weeks."

A reception was tendered to Mr. Redmond last night at the Hoffman House by the Municipal Council of the United Irish League in New York.

ANNOUNCE FOR MONDAY

87 Model Suits Dresses Coats and Wraps

A Telegraph Message from one of the best manufacturers of garments in New York City: "We have a collection of foreign models and our own models of Suits, Coats, Evening Wraps and Dresses. You know we close them out at this time for a round sum, notwithstanding that over half of them came in during the past two weeks. What can you do with them? There are 87 pieces in all."

Chandler & Co. asked what they were worth and were informed that the prices would range anywhere from 35.00, 50.00, 60.00, 75.00, 100.00 to 150.00. They said if they could buy them at a price so low that they could be sold out in one day they would take them all and to do this it would be necessary to divide them into three different lots.

All Suits, Coats and Dresses worth 50.00 and under would have to go at 25.00.

All Suits, Coats and Dresses worth 50.00 to 65.00 would have to go at 35.00.

All Suits, Coats and Dresses worth 65.00 to 150.00 would have to go at 45.00.

The Suits range from the plain tailored to the elaborate dress styles and in value from 40.00 to 135.00.

The Dresses and Costumes range from the tailor-made gown of broadcloth and the afternoon dress to the elaborate evening costume and in value from 40.00 to 100.00.

The Coats and Wraps range from the stylish street coat and effective evening cape to the elaborate opera wrap and in value from 40.00 to 150.00.

The manufacturer, who never allows his merchandise to go into the hands of but one or two of the best houses in each city, accepted the proposition, and beginning Monday Chandler & Co. will sell these EIGHTY PIECES at 25.00, 35.00 and 45.00.

WORCESTER COUNTY GIVES FOSS OVATION

Greeted everywhere with enthusiastic promises of support at the polls Tuesday, Eugene N. Foss to-day resumed his whirlwind tour through Worcester County. Leaving Worcester this morning in his automobile Mr. Foss covered the southern part of the county. This afternoon he spoke at Spencer, shortly after noon, and at Milford at 2:30 o'clock.

Along the route he addressed small gatherings of Worcester county farmers. At the big mills he spoke to the operatives, all of whom cheered his statements. Everywhere feeling seemed to be running over against the Republican machine control of Massachusetts, and expressions were general that Foss will be elected on Tuesday.

"My friends, it is not Eugene N. Foss who is on trial," said Mr. Foss in one of his speeches. "It is the legislation of the Republican party, for which these men are largely responsible. The party of broken pledges of high tariff. It is this party that is on trial."

The statement by the candidate that the tariff legislation is responsible for the high cost of living was cheered everywhere. Mr. Foss asked the support of his hearers for the entire Democratic ticket.

Here is Mr. Foss's speech at Spencer to-day:

Final Appeal to Voters.

"In making the final appeals to the voters of Massachusetts I wish to impress upon you as earnestly as I can the necessity not only of your going to the polls yourself, but of taking your neighbor along with you. I want to have the fullest, the freest, the largest expression of the voters of Massachusetts that has ever been given at the polls.

"I want the Democratic victory to be so decisive that no one will question Massachusetts' verdict on the Payne-Aldrich act and its relation to the high cost of living.

"I earnestly hope that we shall have a fair day, a bright sunshiny day, that under the clear blue sky the thousands on thousands shall go to the polls and register their condemnation of legislation that increases the burdens of the people, and of the legislators and leaders responsible for those burdens. I have no fear as to the result. The more voters who get to the polls, the greater will be the Democratic majority.

"But now for a few words on the issue of the campaign. Republican spellbinders refuse to honestly discuss the issues. They spend their days and their nights in personal abuse of Eugene N. Foss. They make appeals to prejudice in every form. They don't discuss issues. They make false statements knowing them to be false but willing to profit by them if they can only deceive the voters a few days longer.

Nails Beef Trust Statement.

"I see that the Republican candidate for attorney general, a gentleman for whom I have the highest respect, made the statement last night that I am a director in the Beef Trust. I will quote his exact words. Mr. Swift said:

"'It is a fact that Mr. Foss is a director in the Beef Trust and that in a single directors' meeting he could do more to reduce the cost of living than he could ever do as Governor.'

"I am not and never have been a director in the Beef Trust, but if I were I can assure the people of the Commonwealth that the American people would get a square deal on the Beef Trust products, and that American beef would not be sold cheaper in England than it is in the United States. I never owned a share in the Beef Trust in my life.

"I don't expect fair play from my opponents, but I think that they should not make such false statements as this. They refuse to discuss the issues that are uppermost in the minds of the great mass of the people. They advertise a meeting at Tremont Temple to-night, where Senator Lodge, Governor Draper and the other Republican leaders are to speak, and they announce in that advertisement: 'Subject, The Democratic Candidate.'

Attacks Make Votes.

"I am glad to have them continue this line of campaign. It will make votes for me and the entire Democratic ticket. If anything will disgust the intelligent directorate of Massachusetts with the Republican party it will be to see these great leaders in the closing hours of the campaign resort to bitter personal attacks upon the opponent they know is going to win. It is their last desperate chance. They think if they sling mud enough some of it will stick. I wish them joy in their undertaking. My record will stand all the honest scrutiny that may be fixed upon it.

"But, my friends, it is not Eugene N. Foss who is on trial. It is the legislation of the Republican party, for which these men are largely responsible. The party of broken pledges, of high tariff. The party responsible for the added burdens of the people through unjust and unfair legislation. It is the party that refuses in Massachusetts to levy a just tax that wealth may bear its just proportion of the expenses of government even when pleaded with by a Republican President to do so. It is the party that turned away from Boston and New England the great trade of Canada by its hostile legislation. It is the party of a bogus tariff board invented to delay the honest revision of the tariff that would lower the cost of living. It is the party that taxes the food supply of the people, when admitting that there should be no tax on food products at all.

No Republican Defence.

"This is the party that is on trial. It is the legislation of the Republican party and the records of Senator Lodge and the other Republican leaders who are responsible for Republican legislation that is now being arraigned at the bar of public opinion not only in Massachusetts but all over the United States.

"But the Republican leaders admit that they have no defence. Admit that they cannot explain to the voters the questions that the voters are asking them. Their only reply is 'Look at Foss,' and they picture an imaginary Foss that never existed. They abuse, misrepresent and bear false witness.

"If you are satisfied with their arguments. If you believe that they have any honest defence that they can make to the charges preferred against the Republican party by the people, you must wonder why they don't make it.

"The American people are to-day suffering from adverse tariff legislation. They have been denied reciprocity with Canada. They have asked for free raw materials, for an untaxed food supply and for a lowering of the duties on woolen clothing, blankets and underwear and they have been refused. They see the same Stand Pat crowd, the agents of the big protected interests on deck asking to be sent back to legislate still further in the interests of their masters.

Weighing the Evidence.

"And they are weighing the evidence, they are not to be turned aside by the torrent of abuse and misrepresentations poured on one man's head to divert their attention, but they are going to say to these Stand Pat representatives of the big trusts, 'You have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. We asked for bread and you gave us a stone.'

"I appeal to my Republican friends as strongly as to my Democratic comrades. The tariff spear knows no brother. Your family suffers from this unfair and burdensome legislation just as much as the family of your Democratic neighbor. Your store bills are as large as his. Your week's wages won't buy any more than his. You know that the tariff legislation is responsible for this high cost of living. Will you by your vote next Tuesday vote to have your family go without the comforts, and in many, many cases without the necessaries of life in order that a party label may take back into office men who are responsible for the burdens and worries you are carrying?"

14th Congressional District

To my Neighbors:

I am receiving inquiries to the effect: "As Republicans we're going to vote for Foss for the purpose of registering Massachusetts' protest against the tariff as the cause of the present high cost of living, but how about Judge Harris? We want to vote for him. Do you think his election to succeed Congressman Foss will take away any of the force of Massachusetts' protest?"

By all odds vote for Judge Harris, and when you vote for him thank God that you were given the opportunity. Robert O. Harris, measured as a judge, lawyer, statesman, plain citizen or—just a man, is the sort of human fellow for whom humans should vote for anything and everything.

Too bad for us plain citizens that Congress is not full of men of the calibre of Bob Harris. If it were, the men folk could well afford to don their Sunday best on election day, for the occasion would be one of general rejoicing mingled with that sacred feeling which best becomes American citizenship on all occasions having to do with its greatest privilege, the exercise of the franchise.

Too bad for the women folk of America and the children of America, who are compelled to play the part of silent suffering beneficiaries of the vote errors of their men folks, that Congress is not made up of men of the calibre of Judge Harris. If it were, the purchasing power of the American dollar today would be so much greater that rejoicing would replace in all humble American homes the present fearful apprehension of the coming of the gaunt packs which follow in the wake of ascending high costs of living.

By all odds vote for Judge Harris for Congress and don't forget in doing so to thank God you have been given the opportunity.

DALEY ATTACKS WEEKS'S RECORD

Daniel J. Daley of Brookline, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Twelfth District, continued his tour of the district last night, speaking in the Town Halls at Weymouth and Hyde Park. He was accompanied by Sherman L. Whipple, former Representative Sherwin L. Cook of Boston and Owen Cunningham. Mr. Whipple devoted his speech to an exposition of the evils of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and lauded Daley as the man who should be the choice in the Twelfth Congressional District this year.

Mr. Daley attacked Congressman Weeks for his position on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and the way Mr. Weeks paid more importance to the work of the National Monetary Commission instead of the more popular question of the high cost of living. He said in part:

"I want to advise the voters of the Twelfth District that the most important matter would be the prompt revision of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and Mr. Weeks refuses absolutely to state his position upon this bill or to defend his vote in favor of its passage during the last session of Congress."

C. F. ADAMS' LETTER ANGERS THE MAYOR

Mayor Fitzgerald declares that he intends to call the attention of District Attorney Pelletier to the letter sent by Charles Francis Adams to Frederick J. Macleod, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, in which Mr. Adams stated his belief that "the Democratic municipal machine engineered from Boston City Hall, is as corrupt as the famous Tweed ring of forty years ago in New York." The Mayor said that men of the social standing of Adams are responsible by their public utterances for great injury to their country. "I believe that he has laid himself open to criminal proceedings," said the Mayor.

FOLK COMES TO AID DEMOCRATS

Ex-Governor Joseph Folk of Missouri reaches Boston at noon to-day to participate in the rallies in Boston to-night when all the headline speakers for the Democrats will appear at Faneuil Hall and at six other rallies in various sections of the city. Other speakers will be Governor-elect Plaisted of Maine, Congressmen-elect D. J. McGillicuddy and S. W. Gould of Maine, Eugene N. Foss, Thomas F. Cassidy, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, James H. Vahey, Sherman L. Whipple, Henry M. Whitney, Edmund A. Whitman, Thomas P. Riley, C. S. Hamlin, C. W. Bartlett, Thomas J. Boynton.

O'BRIEN AND SMITH ON DAYIGHT TOUR

William H. O'Brien, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth District, and Charles D. Smith, candidate for district attorney for Essex county, continue their strenuous daylight campaign to-day through Rowley, Wenham, Groveland and vicinity, winding up the day with a big open-air rally at Market square, Newburyport, at 7 p. m. and Depot square, Ipswich, at 8:30 p. m. to-night.

The AMERICAN is the Great Home Paper.

AMES URGES LODGE TO QUIT

Congressman Butler Ames appears to be one of the many thousand Republicans in Massachusetts who believes that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is a bigger load for Governor Draper to carry in his campaign for re-election than even the high prices due to the tariff for which Mr. Lodge is in part personally responsible.

Congressman Ames has written Senator Lodge an open letter calling upon him, for the good of the Republican party, to retire from the field as a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate.

Mr. Ames is a Republican himself and believes that if Mr. Lodge will get out the Republican ticket may be saved. The letter reads:

Says Lodge is Burden to Draper.

"To the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, Nahant, Mass.:

"Dear Sir:

"As one of the Republican nominees for Congress, as a loyal member of the Republican party, as one anxious for the success of the Republican State and Congressional ticket, I respectfully call your attention to the following facts and make the following suggestions:

"Three years ago Massachusetts was Republican by 100,000 majority; last year our Governor and Lieutenant-Governor pulled through by a scant 10,000 votes, while the rest of the State ticket held nearer to normal majorities.

"This year, at every rally and in every speech, the Democrats have attacked our Governor and the whole State ticket on your account. They have iterated and reiterated that a vote for Foss and the Democratic ticket would be a vote against Lodge (you).

Issue is Bossism.

"The re-election, not only of our Governor, but of the whole State ticket, is in great jeopardy owing to the opposition of the voters generally to your re-election to the United States Senate, and to your continued control of the party's machinery. Convincing evidence of which lies in the fact that every Democratic speaker and every Democratic paper has made your bossism the issue of this campaign. All last Winter, Spring and Summer I maintained that your control of the party's machinery was inimical to the party's success.

"It is now apparent to every one that such is the case. And in order that our Governor and all the State ticket may be saved from impending defeat I suggest that in a spirit of unselfishness and with the remembrance of twenty-four years of public service to your party, you remove this issue by at once and publicly pledging the voters of Massachusetts that you will not be a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate this coming January.

"This may seem to you to be heroic treatment of the present political situation; but there seems to be no alternative. It can safely be predicted that if you will seriously make such a withdrawal our whole State ticket will win with satisfactory majorities. I hope you will believe that this suggestion as a logical corollary to the above mentioned facts is not actuated by selfish motives on my part, but is prompted by an earnest desire to save our Governor and the Republican party from threatened defeat.

"Very respectfully,
"BUTLER AMES."

FOSS' PROPHECY FOR NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The New York Evening Post to-day prints the following ante-election statement by Eugene N. Foss:

"The old Bay State, by the vote of its people is preparing to render in large figures its verdict on the Payne-Aldrich act, which will be an overwhelming condemnation of this most unjust and iniquitous measure. The Fourteenth Congressional District of Massachusets, a rick-ribbed Republican stronghold, last Spring repudiated the Payne-Aldrich act, turning a Republican majority of 14,000 of the year before into a Democratic majority of 6,000. The turnover of last Spring in that district will be repeated next Tuesday in the entire Comonwealth.

"Massachusetts knows the Empire State will second her efforts and help lift the burden of unjust and unnecessary taxation from the people. The Republican party promised to revise the tariff downward in response to the demands of the people. Instead, it betrayed the people shamelessly and legislated in favor of special privilege and selfish interests.

Prices Rose Under New Law.

"Immediately upon the passage of the Payne-Aldrich act prices began to rise, until to-day in every home in the land the question of how to make both ends meet is a most serious one.

"The whole country is aroused in protest against this unjust and unholy Payne-Aldrich tariff law—a law that is unfairly taxing the people, increasing their burdens and making the problem of home life all over the country a troublesome and a worrisome one. The food supply of the people was never included in the tax. The protective tariff was enacted to protect manufacturers from unfair foreign competition, not to allow food trusts or any other trusts to be so sheltered by a high tariff wall that they could take the people by the throats and rob them.

"Under Schedule K, the wool and woolen schedule, which President Taft declared was "indefensible," the duties were placed so high that pure woolen cloth costs twice as much here as abroad, and as a result the great masses of the American people are forced to wear cotton worsteds and slack and lazy miserable fabrics made of cotton and poor American shoddy in the place of warm wool. It deprives the majority of American people of the warm clothing so essential to health and comfort. of the people. It is protection run mad

For the Benefit of the Few.

"It is a tariff for the benefit of the few at the expense of the great masses

"We should have reciprocity with Canada. We need her markets for our manufactured products, we need to draw on her almost limitless natural resources, we need her wheat, her beef, her mutton, her fish. It is an unwise economic policy that forces our manufacturers to establish branch factories across the Candian border, to supply the Canadian trade when we could supply them better and cheaper at home if these tariff barriers were removed. American labor ought to be given the chance to produce the goods turned out in those Canadian factories of American business men. In the past decade 300,000,000 American dollars have gone into establishing branch mills and factories in Canada because tariff walls prevent freer intercourse with our northern neighbors.

"The people will no longer stand it. They are aroused as they have not been in a generation. As well try to stop the stars in their courses, or the tide as it rises resistlessly, to to try to stop the people when they rise in indignant protest to overwhelm those who have betrayed them at the orders of special privileges. They have debased the American dollar, which to-day won't buy what could be bought with half a dollar five years ago.

"The party in power is responsible for the higher cost of living that touches the people at every point and every day in the year, and an indignant people on Tuesday next is going to rebuke that party by defeating it at the polls."

DIX BY 100,000 IS NEW YORK PROPHECY

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—William S. Rodie, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic State Committee, issued the following election forecast to-day, speaking for Chairman Huppuch of the State Committee, as well as himself:

"We went over the State county by county and base our estimates on district canvasses. As a result I will not concede it possible for John A. Dix, candidate for Governor, to win by less than 100,000 plurality. I arrive at this conclusion by a very conservative system of estimates, in which I have given the Republicans the benefit of every doubt. Mr. Huppuch has even a bigger plurality for Dix, for he believes the latter will win by 150,000."

KENNEY WAGING HOT FIGHT IN WARD 21

One of the most closely contested fights of the campaign is taking place in Ward 21, where James T. Kenney is canvassing nightly, attacking the records of Representatives John Carr and John E. Roumaniere, who he is opposing for election to the Legislature. Kenney is basing his claims for preference over these two men on the fact that they voted against every labor measure that came before the last session of the Legislature. He is also calling attention to Roumaniere's attitude on the milk question. He declares that Roumaniere is against milk legislation favorable to the consumer.

The Republican campaign managers centered all their energy to-day in an effort to make the Republican rally in Tremont Temple to-night the biggest affair of its kind ever held in this city. Governor Draper, former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., and Senator Lodge, Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester and Guy A. Ham are scheduled to speak.

Apropos of the Tremont Temple plans there was considerable discussion in Republican circles to-day as to why Lieut.-Gov. Louis A. Frothingham's name does not appear in the list of Temple speakers given out at headquarters. A survey of the Republican rally schedule for to-night shows that Frothingham is shunted way out to Concord, which has all the earmarks of an intention to go Democratic next Tuesday.

The spectacle of "our boy Louis" being sent out to face a probably hostile audience, while Draper, Guild, Lodge and a couple of men not on the State ticket sat serenely in the speakers' row at Tremont Temple was not pleasing to the Boston Republicans and much grumbling was heard. It was unofficially intimated at headquarters to-day that the grumbling might result in the discovery that Frothingham's name had been left out of the Tremont Temple list through an oversight.

Rallies on Cape.

Besides the rally in Tremont Temple to-night there will be rallies also in Concord, Wakefield, Easthampton, North Adams, Natick, Bedford and Winchendon and on Cape Cod.

Less than usual activity marked last night's Republican rallies. It was due in a measure to the storm, known politically as "Democratic weather," inasmuch as the majority of Republican voters are popularly known to be of a class that does not care to brave a storm for the sake of hearing political speeches. However, at the rallies held by the Republicans in various parts of the State this belief concerning the weather did not hold good, for while there were fewer of the more prominent Republican speakers abroad, the enthusiasm was even greater than on preceding nights, and halls were reported filled to overflowing in nearly every district where the rallies were conducted.

Explains Veto.

Fall River was the stronghold for the Republicans last night, where a number of rallies were held, and where Governor Draper made a number of addresses. In the "north" rally in Fall River James Sullivan shouted: 'What about the high cost of living!" as the Governor was leaving the hall, and the police were called in to quell the disturbance, as Sullivan grasped Governor Draper by the arm as he was leaving. A crowd gathered and had to be driven away by the police.

In twenty cities and towns other rallies were held, and there was a good attendance at most of these. Former Governor Guild was the principal speaker at Fitchburg.

Senator Lodge took a day and night off for a rest. Congressman Samuel W. McCall made an active and successful tour of the Cape district.

WILLCUTT DESERTS DRAPER FOR FOSS

William B. Willcutt, Republican State Committeeman from the Dorchester-West Roxbury District, to-day resigned that office and declared for Eugene N. Foss for Governor. His action caused a sensation in business as well as political circles. Mr. Willcutt is prominent in both.

Mr. Willcutt has addressed a letter to Chairman Charles E. Hatfield of the Republican State Committee, resigning, and giving as his reason that the high protective tariff touted by the Republican machine leaders as the saviour of "our infant industries" is nothing more or less than a cloak under which trusts and monopolies overcapitalize, issue watered stock and boost prices.

Letter to Foss.

Mr. Willcutt has also addressed a letter to Eugene N. Foss, the Democratic candidate for Governor, offering his support to him.

Willcutt lives at No. 31 Walton street, in Ward 24, Dorchester. He served in the Boston Common Council in 1906 and 1907, and in the House of Representatives in 1908 and 1909. In the last year, he attracted much attention by his stand against the Lodge-Crane Republican machine when it was jamming the present Boston charter through the Legislature. He was one of three Republicans who Mr. Willcutt's letter to Mr. Foss is as follows:

"November 4, 1910.

"Mr. Eugene N. Foss, Boston, Mass.

"Dear Sir—I have to-day forwarded to the Republican State Committee a letter tendering my resignation and stating the reasons for withdrawing my support from the Republican nominee and tendering the same to you. The Republican voter, on election day, will find himself confronted with the alternative of either approving of the conditions as they exist to-day, as brought about by the Republican administration and the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and voting for the Republican nominee, or of showing his disapproval of the same by administering a rebuke to the Republican party by defeating its nominee.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed) "WILLIAM WILLCUTT."

Willcutt's Letter.

Mr. Willcutt's letter to Chairman Hatfield is as follows:

"Mr. Charles E. Hatfield, chairman,

"Republican State Committee,

"Boston, Mass.

"Dear Sir—I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the Republican State Committee and ask that the same become effective at once, so that any further action of mine will in no way embarrass your committee. When the Republican party first went in record in favor of a protective tariff it was for the reason of protecting our infant industries and to allow them an opportunity to build themselves up so as to be able to manufacture and produce material on a par with foreign countries. This protection they needed at that time, and it was proper that they should have the same, and under the protection of the tariff these concerns prospered and continued to expand until eventually they no longer needed protection, as they were able to ship their manufactured goods in competition all over the world.

"They then became so prosperous that they reached out and consolidated one with the other until, finally, the leading industries of this country are controlled directly or indirectly by a few men. Consolidation upon consolidation of these companies were brought about mainly through watering their stock, and in order to pay dividends and make the stock valuable they increased the cost of the goods manufactured.

Republicans Responsible.

"During this period the Republican party have had the power and control over national affairs and, consequently, is responsible for the conditions as they exist today. Primarily, the high protective tariff is responsible, for they have believed in a high duty to protect the industries of this country—which was all very well at the beginning; but they forgot to place the proper safeguard to protect the people against these very industries, when they began to consolidate and create a monopoly of themselves under the protective tariff.

"The relief for this unjust condition of affairs was promised to the people by the Republican party two years ago by a proper revision of the tariff. This revision as represented by the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, was nothing more or less than a farce and did not in any way relieve the situation or restore the confidence, because the people were still obliged to bear the burden imposed upon them by the manipulation of monopolies created through the assistance of the protective tariff. The increased cost of living and other goods in proportion are not brought about by the increased wage to the laborer but are to a large extent to the over-capitalization of companies in order to make their watered stock pay dividends and become valuable.

"With this in mind, I shall be unable to support the Republican nominee for Governor although I have been a life-long Republican. It is not a question of Mr. Foss or Mr. Draper that confronts the people of Massachusetts to-day but the principles they represent, and the only way that the Republican voter may express his disapproval of the unfair and unjust treatment which the people at large are receiving is to register a rebuke by defeating the Republican ticket this Fall.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed) "WILLIAM B. WILLCUTT."

Hatfield's Letter.

Chairman Hatfield's reply to Willcutt is as follows:

"To William B. Willcutt, Esq., 31 Walton street, Boston:

"Dear Sir—I have your letter of November 4 and note what you say concerning your resignation as a member of the Republican State Committee. Also your statement that you do not desire to embarrass the committee by any further action of yours.

"Concerning this latter matter, you, of course, must realize that your attitude during the past year has been a source of continued embarrassment to the committee, and my only regret is that this action on your part was not taken some months ago. The committee as a whole has not been able to regard you in the past as a member who was in sympathy either with the principles or purposes of the Republican party, a fact which the Republicans of your district must have discerned in failing to re-elect you to the State committee this year.

"Your resignation at this particular time, when the party has the right to expect the loyal support of its officials, impresses me, as it must impress the public, as a move on your part largely for political effect, and while I regret to so characterize it, your action forces me to this conclusion. Yours very truly,

"CHARLES E. HATFIELD, Chairman."

MATTHEWS, JR., QUITS HARVARD

Dissatisfaction over the interest shown in his lectures and the results obtained, is said to be the cause for the resignation of Nathan Matthews, Jr., former Mayor of Boston, from the teaching force at Harvard. The announcement of his retirement as lecturer on municipal government is made in the official organ of the university, the Harvard Gazette.

Mr. Matthews last Fall accepted a position as lecturer on city government and municipal problems, and gave a course last Winter known as Government Thirty, the official title of which was "Municipal Government, with special reference to Massachusetts cities." Mr. Matthews has been quoted by officials of the university as saying that the work required of him in giving the course at Harvard was not enough productive of results to make it worth his while to continue it.

The course, which was given in the first half-year in the last academic year, was quite popular, about 150 men registering for it. It took up in detail the governments of cities in ancient and modern times, and devoted several weeks to a consideration of special topics connected with the government of the city of Boston.

Mr. Matthews was graduated from Harvard in 1875 and later from the Harvard Law School. Besides having an active practice, Mr. Matthews has been the author of many books, articles and addresses on political subjects.

$2,500 FOR NEW HEIGHT RECORD

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5.—Added interest was given the events in the aviation meet here when Gen. Felix Agnus offered a prize of $2,500 for the first aviator to reach at this meet an altitude of 10,000 feet, creating a new world's record for height.

It is said that Wilbur Wright is anxious to have one of his men win this prize, and that it is exceedingly probable that Hoxsey will go after the record with a determination to get it.

Arrangements have been made to extend the time of the meet beyond that of the original sanction, and so far as can be learned all the aviators will remain here throughout the extended time.

BRIBE CASE LAWYER IS INDICTED AGAIN

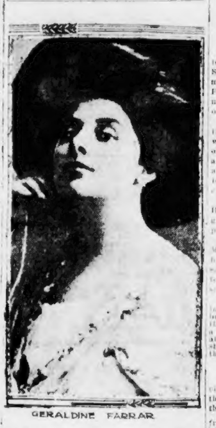
CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—Charles E. Erbstein, attorney for Lee O'Neil Brown in his bribery trial, who was indicted on a charge of jury tampering, has been indicted again, this time on a charge of conspiracy to defraud State's Attorney Wayman's character. The indictment also accuses Arthur McBride, John Doe, Richard Roe and John Roe and divers other persons of the same offence.

DR. THOMPSON OF BOSTON CONVICTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—Dr. Robert Thompson, formerly of Boston, charged with the murder of Eva Swan, has been found guilty of murder in the second degree.

The body of Miss Swan, who died from an operation, was found two months ago buried under the basement floor of a deserted cottage.

NEW PHOTOGRAPH OF MISS FARRAR, MELROSE SINGER



GERALDINE FARRAR

2,000 BRAVE RAIN TO HEAR FARRAR

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Flooded streets and drenching rain, blustery wind and biting cold made arrival at Symphony Hall a difficult and unpleasant matter yesterday afternoon, but Geraldine Farrar was soloist and the weather did not prevetn a single seat from getting an occupant.

The management saved the patrons of the rush seats from death by drowning when it threw open the doors of the second balcony considerably ahead of time, and many of the patrons of the floor looked as though they had been rescued from watery graves by the condition of their clothes when they arrived.

Geraldine Farrar's personal popularity in Boston can be depended upon to draw a great audience and it was put to a supreme test yesterday.

After the Rachmaninoff Symphony in E Minor had been performed, Miss Farrar's first number was announced. Two thousand people craned their necks, the men to see what she looked like, the women to see what she wore.

Geraldine created a sensation. She was in a street dress and wore a hat and muff, but nobody believed she walked in from the street in that regalia. The hat was a great turban which rested on her nose and the back of her neck and only when she threw her head back could you see the glow of her dark eyes.

Hands Hidden in a Muff.

Her hands were hidden in a huge chinchilla muff, and she wore a pink gown of the very latest model. It was easy to see that Miss Farrar was just from Europe.

It was easy to tell that she was fresh from Germany by her voice, for she had been screaming her pretty head off for the edification of the Kaiser and his friends in Berlin and she hasn't yet recovered from the strain.

Miss Farrar had selected two unknown arias for performance. The little singer loves to burrow in music libraries and study the history and accomplishments of the past. Occasionally she sticks in her thumb, pulls out a plum and exclaims "What a smart girl am I!"

The air of Therise from Isouard's "Jeannot et Colin," a long dead and buried opera comique that was the vogue in Paris in 1814 was one of these plums, and it may be said that it is a sugar plum. Such a sweet dainty little melody and a charming accompaniment deserves a better fate than oblivion.

A forgotten concert aria by Mozart was the second discovery. There are people who search the waste baskets of poets in search of verse that the poet has discarded because they were worthy of him, and others who publish letters of dead authors in order to give the public something more of their favorites. When a composition by Mozart is permitted to perish from disuse it is safe to believe that it wasn't good enough to be associated with the name of Mozart and in spite of the clever arrangement of "Misero o sogna," by Dr. Muck, especially for Miss Farrar, the aria does not make a great impression.

Not At Her Best.

Miss Farrar sacrifices one of her greatest assets when she steps on the concert stage, her powers as an actress. She is sweet and pretty and knows how to wear clothes, but she is not in any sense a great singer. She was not even at her best yesterday.

In her French song her voice was sweet but thin in the lyric passages, and unpleasantly forced when the high notes were called for. Her singing of the few florid passages lacked brilliancy and her execution was ordinary.

There was no excuse for the shriek she emitted at the conclusion of the Mozart aria. The audience was friendly and applauded warmly but there was no great enthusiasm.

The Rachmaninoff Symphony is more beautiful on a second hearing and the Beethoven "Egmont" overture is always grand. The orchestra played a Chaconne and Rigadon from the old French opera of "Aline, Reine de Golconde" in most bewitching manner.

MRS. VAN VALKENBURG TRAVELS INCOGNITO

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Philip Van Valkenburg, formerly Mrs. William Hayes Chapman, has returned from Europe, and, although she was known to have sailed from England on the Mauretania her name did not appear on the passenger list, nor was she seen to leave the steamer when it docked. Her friends believe now that she came in under an assumed name. On account of her pending divorce suit, Mrs. Van Valkenburg wished to come in as quietly as possible, and few, if any, of her friends know where she is stopping.

SEES NEWPORT; IS GLAD CHILDREN WERE BORN POOR

But when I go down to Newport and see the wonderful palaces erected by the fabulously rich; when I see the rich men who have five or six living wives; when I see rich women with five or six living husbands, and when I see the little children of the rich with three or four papas and mammas, I thank God my children were born reasonably poor.—Roswell B. Burchard, Speaker of Rhode Island House of Representatives.

WISE MEN BUY DICTIONARIES

When your boss or the man to whom you are making that big bluff comes along and begins to tell about the new "diptych" he has secured, of course you begin to look very wise. It is reasonable to suppose that you don't know if he is talking of a new automobile or some patent medicine. That is the time when you mentally say, "Oh, if I only had one of those BOSTON AMERICAN dictionaries now!" But you remember that you cut out the coupons and left them at home, so you are stuck. Unless the boss explains what a "diptych" is, you are stuck and you have no dictionary at home to look it up.

It's just this condition that makes the wise man hustle to the premium department of the BOSTON AMERICAN with the seven coupons of consecutive dates and 35 cents as required for the cloth bound edition; seven coupons and 65 cents for the leather edition; seven coupons and 95 cents for the beautiful morocco bound edition. But no matter which one you get, the volume will prove a most valuable acquisition.

LE BLANC GIRL HAPPY IN JAIL

In the first statement that Sheriff John R. Fairbairn of the East Cambridge Jail ever gave out in connection with the imprisonment of Hattie Le Blanc, who is soon to be tried for the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover, he said to a reporter of this newspaper to-day that the little French girl has been a deep student during the year she has been locked up; that she can speak English fluently, and that she is very anxious for the day when her trial starts to arrive.

"Since she was confined in the jail," said Sheriff Fairbairn, "Hattie has gained twenty-three pounds. When she first came here she tipped the scales at 107 pounds. Now she weighs about 130 pounds.

"From the time she came here she has never been other than a happy and contented young girl. She has always been bright and cheerful. If she had any worries she never showed it. She is, indeed, a very bright little girl.

"In picking out her friends she seems to have had a preference for French people. To them she always talked in their native tongue.

"In the matter of acquiring knowledge Hattie was exceedingly active. She used the library as often as she could, and it is wonderful what a great deal of valuable knowledge she has picked up. She read good books, and read a lot of them, and never seemed to tire of playing the student. She worked especially hard to acquire a knowledge of English, and now she speaks as good English as you or I.

"In every way Hattie has been a bright and apt pupil and a model prisoner. She was always industrious, and wanted to work. She was assigned to the laundry department. There she has been working every day, doing her best, and she really has accomplished much. She is a fine little laundress. She also sews occasionally.

"The only thing about which she displays anxiety is her trial. She is anxious to have it begin and finish. She will not discuss the facts of the case with anyone, but she talks willingly of her desire to have the trial start."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is no "cure-all" humbug, but is made for just one purpose—to cure the weaknesses, painful disorders and irregularities of the womanly organism. It is

THE ONE REMEDY for these ailments, sold by druggists, devised and gotten up by a regularly graduated physician of vast experience in treating woman's peculiar diseases and is carefully adapted to work in harmony with her delicate organization, by an experienced and skilled specialist in her maladies.*

THE ONE REMEDY for woman's ailments, sold by druggists, which contains neither alcohol (which to most women is the rankest poison) or other injurious or habit-forming drugs.*

THE ONE REMEDY for women, the composition of which is so perfect and good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient, in plain English on its outside bottle-wrapper, and attest the correctness of the same under oath—thus taking its users into their full confidence, and warranting physicians in prescribing it in their worst cases, which they do very largely.*

It is foolish as well as dangerous to take medicine the composition of which you know nothing. Therefore, don't let a dishonest druggist prevail on you to accept a secret nostrum for this professionally approved medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Every ingredient in its make-up has the strongest indorsement of the leading medical men of all the several schools of practice. Send postal card request for free Booklet of same.

Every woman may write fully and confidentially to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and may be sure that her case will receive careful, conscientious, confidential consideration, and that the best medical advice in the world will be given to her, absolutely free.

In addition to this free advice, Dr. Pierce will send a fine French cloth-bound copy of his great 1000-page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," to any woman who will send 31 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They work in harmony with "Favorite Prescription" when needed as a gentle laxative. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

ARMED POSSE HUNTS ASSASSIN

MEREDITH, N. H., Nov. 5.—Making open threats that they "will string him up" when they get him, more than 200 armed men, headed by High Sheriff Philbrook of Belknap County, began a determined search of the outlying districts of this part of the State to-day for Thomas Connolly, who, after trying to murder Edward Wiggin yesterday, threw Fred Burke, a fifteen-year-old boy employed by Wiggin, to the ground, held him down with his knee on his breast and fired a shot into the boy's head.

Young Burke is being attended by two physicians and is hovering between life and death. The physicians, Drs. Harriman and Hawkins, have not yet been able to get the bullet, and they fear complications that will prove fatal.

Hold Two Suspects.

Back of the story of the shooting is a story to the effect that Connolly, who had been for several years in the employ of Wiggin, was in love with Miss Ethel Wiggin, the pretty twenty-year-old daughter of the house. Connolly had gone to the house where Miss Wiggin, her older sister, Miss Florence Wiggin, and their chum, Miss Katherine Coates of Chicopee Falls, were, and tried to get in. He had made threats against Miss Ethel and the young women barred him out.

Never before has this community been wrought to such a pitch of excitement. The last seen of Connolly he was headed toward the north, and as he was formerly employed as a woodsman at Corbett Park, in the northern part of the State, it is thought by some that the fugitive may have started for there.

The police of Worcester have been asked to look for him, as he has relatives there of prominence and has $300 or more in a savings bank there.

Two arrests were made early to-day in the case, one at Woodsville and the other at Lakeport, this State, but the authorities here do not think either man is Connolly.

Posse Ready to Shoot.

Assisting High Sheriff Philbrook in the search are City Marshal William Harvell and John Morrison, chief of police. They have under them twenty-five uniformed policemen from Laconia, twenty-five deputy sheriffs and more than 100 civilians, all armed and ready to shoot if Connolly should show any resistance when he is caught.

George Sanborn, first selectman of Meredith, said to-day:

"This crime of Connolly's is one of the most fiendish things of which I have ever heard. This town will spare no expense to capture the man. I have ordered automobiles to carry armed officers along every road from Meredith for miles around, and we propose to keep up this search until the fugitive is captured."

Connolly is about forty years of age. He is about 5 feet 2 inches in height; sandy complexion; weight 130 pounds; has broken nose. He was regarded as a very peaceable man when sober, but had been drinking a great deal of late. He had been employed on the Wiggin farm about five years.

Connolly was greatly interested in a very pretty niece who graduated from Vassar last year and came to the Wiggin farm to spend the Summer. Connolly was regarded here as the black sheep of a prominent family in Worcester. He had let it be known that he was in love with Miss Ethel Wiggin, but none of the family took him seriously about this.

Rejected in Love Suit.

Connolly reported about the farm last Wednesday that he intended to kill Ethel. He had been actuated in making this threat it is supposed, by the fact that the girl would not consider his attentions to her seriously. Ethel's brother, Hollis Wiggin, who is a very promeint young farmer and district deputy of the Grange, went to Wiggin about the shooting report.

"Is it true that you said you would shoot Ethel?" Hollis asked.

"No, I never said anything of the kind," asserted Connolly.

But an hour later Connolly went to Edward Wiggin, the head of the family, in a morose mood and said:

"I'm through on this farm and I want my money."

Wiggin paid Connolly $15 and he disappeared. The next day Connolly went to Laconia and reappeared in this neighborhood in the evening with what his acquaintances called "one of Connolly's fighting jags."

In the meantime Connolly had bought a revolver. Connolly showed the weapon on Friday. Early in the day he met Samuel Hayward, Jr., whom he knew, and asked for the loan of some money.

"I haven't a cent," said Connolly. "Wiggin owes me money and he won't pay it. I'm going up there to kill Hollis and then I'm going to kill myself.

ADAMS GUILTY ON ONE COUNT

A. D. T. Adams, the former State street stock broker, charged with larceny of collateral from customers in nine counts, aggregating $10,000, was found guilty on one count by the verdict read before Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court to-day.

The ninth count, on which Adams was found guilty, was larceny of shares of East Butte, Trinity, American Pneumatic, Laramie, Acme and Nipissing stocks to a total of $960.

The jury had previously been instructed by Judge Stevens to return verdicts of not guilty on the first, seventh and eighth counts.

The jury had six counts left to consider. On the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth counts they found him not guilty.

The jury was out five hours and twenty-five minutes.

The sealed verdict of the jury was held up when court opened on account of the mysterious absence of one juror.

The case went to the jury at 3:30 yesterday afternoon. The jury reached its verdict at 8:55. The verdict was put in a sealed envelope, to be opened in court to-day.

When court opened, with Adams, the court, counsel and others present, one juror was missing. He is Albert D. Ellis, salesman, with address given as No. 8 St. James street. A messenger was sent for Ellis and found that Ellis had recently moved to an address unknown.

When this information reached the court Attorney Clarence W. Rowley, counsel for Adams, said they would be willing to accept a verdict from eleven jurors only he feared his client would not waive his constitutional rights to that extent. Judge Stevens said he would not care to take a verdict from eleven jurors.

A moment later, however, Ellis came, out of breath. He explained that he had been delayed. The sealed verdict was then opened.

Takes Verdict Calmly.

Adams took the verdict calmly. Attorney Rowley was given thirty days in which to file exceptions to the verdict and the rulings.

The trial of Adams began October 24 before Judge Stevens and jury in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court. Adams, a broker in the Exchange building, was charged with larceny in nine counts, aggregating $10,000, from customers. Three of the complainants were Clarence E. Gale, George H. Robinson and John F. Burt. Adams was defended by Clarence W. Rowley. Assistant District Attorney Webber prosecuted the case.

Adams was recently sued by F. Augustus Heinze, the New York copper operator, for alleged conversion of stock valued at $250,000. The Heinze suit has been in progress during the trial of Adams on the criminal charge.

Assistant District Attorney Webber, in his opening address at the larceny trial, said that the government would show that Adams, instead of conducting a legitimate brokerage business, had run a bucket shop, that customers had been unable to get accounting for collateral and that criminal action finally became necessary.

Cautioned by Judge.

During the trial Judge Stevens spoke more than once to Attorney Rowley, counsel for Adams, regarding the manner in which Rowley was conducting the case. On the opening day Mr. Rowley said he would show that witnesses had been "coached" in the District Attorney's office. Judge Stevens immediately said that such a remark should not have been made. Mr. Rowley apologized.

On the second day Mr. Rowley said the defendant would not be convicted on "perjured testimony." This brought rebuke from Judge Stevens. Later in the day Judge Stevens said to Mr. Rowley: "Don't be shouting so loudly."

On the third day of the trial Adams was arrested by Inspector Gaddis on an indictment charging him with larceny of twenty-five shares of Trinity stock and $381 in addition from Charles T. Smith of New Bedford. Adams's bail of $4,000 in the present trial was increased $1,000 for the new charges.

On the third day, also, there was another item of extra interest in the presence on the bench with Judge Stevens of Kungpah T. King, Supreme Court Justice of Pekin and a graduate of King's College, London. The Oriental justice listened for a half-hour to the complicated financial testimony.

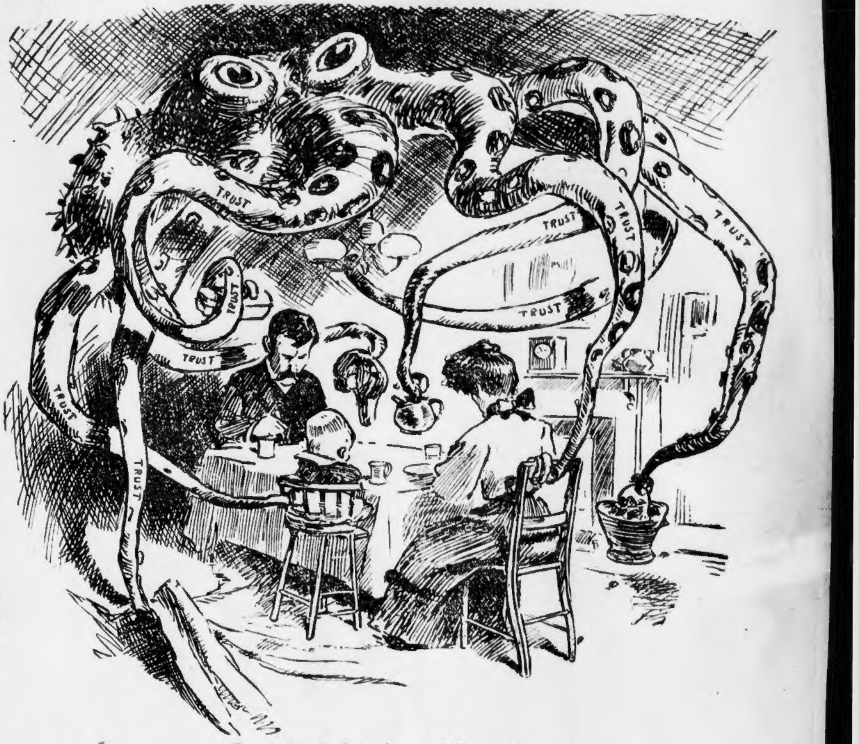
Foss or Draper?



Reprinted from the Boston American of Nov. 1, 1904

This is not a political advertisement.

It is simply a question.

It is the question everybody is asking, from Provincetown to Williamstown, from Great Barrington up to Newburyport.

Nearly everybody who asks it, answers it. You must have noticed that. Is that so? Do it yourself, eh? Well, well.

The trouble is, however, that most men who ask this question, and who proceed to answer it at once, are apt to be a little prejudiced. If they are honest men they will admit this prejudice.

What everybody ought to have on Sunday, therefore, two days before election, is an honest review of the situation, an honest report of local conditions in every corner of the State. You will find such a report in THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

You will want to know, on Sunday, why the Democratic leaders up in Western Massachusetts are writing to their friends in this corner of the State that Prof. Edward Morgan Lewis of Williams College, who used to be Pitcher "Ted" Lewis of the Boston baseball nines, has a fighting chance against Congressman George P. Lawrence, and that the Hon. Christopher T. Callahan of Holyoke will take the Western District Attorneyship from Stephen S. Taft of Springfield.

Probably you will want to know why Republicans, banking on past performances, say "pooh pooh" to these Democratic claims, and declare, with Governor Draper, that it is all "brag and bluster."

Then you will want to know what conservative men, political writers and statisticians of long experience, right on the ground, say of both Republican and Democratic chances.

GET THE SUNDAY AMERICAN!

Democrats say they are going to hold the Fourteenth Congressional District, which Mr. Foss wrested last Spring from the Republicans. They say they will carry Essex County for Foss and Cassidy by 2,000 or 3,000 votes. That, you know, would be remarkable. They say they will win Congressional fights, legislative delegations and county offices all over Massachusetts. They even talk of duplicating the victory in Maine, walking away with the Legislature and electing a Senator to succeed Henry Cabot Lodge at Washington!

Whatever you may think about these claims you will want to read about them in the Sunday American. So will hundreds of thousands of your fellow citizens. Hadn't you better place an order for it now with your newsdealer.

The "High Cost of Living"

To the Republican orators this seems to be almost a forbidden subject. They say either that it isn't so, that they are not to blame, that the condition is international, or what has the State Government got to do about it?

Which has reminded one of the Sunday American's young men—a bright chap who has a way of keeping track of such things—of a cartoon that appeared in these columns some six years ago. That was 1904, when William L. Douglas was the Democratic candidate for Governor.

At that time there was a lot of talk about the great combinations of capital, which have come to be known as trusts. The Boston American said, and Democratic orators declared, that the piling up of these combinations, one after another, trusts in foodstuffs and trusts in wearing apparel and trusts in other necessities—all "protected" by the species of plunder known as the Payne-Aldrich (then the "Dingley") tariff—was bound to increase the cost of living.

Republican orators answered that this was the yellow talk of a yellow journal. They called it rubbish, and twaddle, and Democratic humbug.

And that's what they say to-day!

We thought you might be interested in seeing again, after the lapse of six years, a High Cost of Living cartoon printed in the Boston American in 1904, so here it is.

Of course there will be other features in the Boston Sunday American—it will, as usual, be the best Sunday newspaper in New England—but what we are talking about here is the political situation. The most reliable information about that situation will appear in the Sunday edition of this newspaper.

While you think of it—we say this as one friend to another—speak to your newsdealer.

SOME LATE DOPE ON THE WORLD SERIES

By Artie Hofman.

Pitching won the world's series for the Athletics. Bender and Coombs were in better form than Brown, Overall and Reulbach. Connie Mack's two stars are not better pitchers than Brown, Overall and Reulbach.

They were good and ready for the series, while the Cub pitchers were overworked and out of their stride.

I shall attempt no excuse for the Cubs. The season's history will bear me out.

Brown was not on edge because he had been worked hard early in the season. He is a warm-weather pitcher, but Manager Chance needed him to keep going early in the race, and used him harder and oftener than he has been worked at that time in the five years of his wonderful career with Chicago.

Just Like Donovan.

Brown's two defeats were much the same as those of Wild Bill Donovan in the Cub-Tiger world series of 1907 and 1908. Donovan pitched better ball against Chicago in those two series than Bender or Coombs did this year, but Donovan, like Brown, was worn down by a grueling pennant race. He lacked staying power for the last crucial battles.

His 3 to 3 ten-inning tie game with us in the first game in 1907 was one of the greatest games ever pitched. It was greater than the records show.

Only the Chicago batters know what Donovan did that day. Again in 1908 he pitched a wonderful game.

We did not make a foul off him in seven innings. He weakened then and we beat him. Had not Donovan been worked out winning the pennant the Tigers would have given the Cubs great battles each year.

Prefers Donovan.

Either of Donovan's two great games against us was better than Bender's best game or any of Coombs' three games. In my judgment, Donovan and George Mullin of the Tigers are better pitchers than Bender and Coombs.

Overall was not in form and had not been since midseason, when he hurt his arm in Boston. Jack Pfeister, our southpaw, had his wrist broken by a line drive from Chief Meyer's bat in New York.

He did not have time to get in shape after he was able to pitch again. Ed Reulbach had diphtheria last Spring, and the antitoxin he was given put him out of the running for the season.

Cole's 4 to 3 10-inning victory over the Athletics proves my assertion that good pitching was all we needed. We played a better ball that day than in any other game of the series.

The Cubs looked bad in the games they lost, but the best team looks like a bush league bunch when its pitchers are being hit. And the other fellows look that much better.

The Cubs missed Evers. He is our best lead-off man and is a wonderful all-around player. Sheckard, our first man up, got to base 10 times. I believe Evers would have got on oftener, and getting on base 10 times more might have had a big effect. Little things make a ball game.

Won by Hitting.

Then Evers is a fine base runner. He worries the pitchers and is a hard man all the time. Zimmerman played a good game at second, but Zimmerman isn't Evers. Zimmerman will be a great ball player. I look for him to be a regular star next year.

The Cubs will "come back." Brown will be as good as ever after the long rest this winter. Overall has said he won't pitch again. He'll be back and as good as ever, and so will Reulbach and Pfeister. All are great pitchers.

The Cubs won the pennant by Kling's return to the game and good form all season, Brown's and Cole's great pitching and timely long hits. In one series in New York we made eight home runs. Our outfield hit better than ever before.

Praise for Collins.

The Athletics played grand ball, especially Collins, Barry and Baker. Murphy's hitting was timely.

Collins is the greatest base runner I ever saw. He has great judgment and speed. He doesn't run the bases as wild as Cobb, but he's wild enough. He got a good lead on our pitchers, which made it impossible to catch him.

Barry played remarkable ball. He is one of the great shortstops. He has been mentioned so seldom that his great form surprised us.

Baker's fielding and all around work was one of the big features.

The Athletics are one of the greatest ball clubs I ever played against. They have a lineup of timely batters, and in Collins, Barry and Baker one of the grandest infields in baseball to-day.

"Cubs Are Young."

The Cubs and Athletics should have a great battle for top honors in 1911. They are sure to win the American League pennant, and I don't see how we are going to lose in our league.

The Cubs are young. We were the youngest team in baseball when we won our first pennant in baseball five years ago. I believe there are as many teams that average older than we are as there are that average younger.

We have the two greatest catchers that ever played ball in Kling and Archer. I have mentioned our pitchers. And so on down the line the Cubs are youthful, vigorous, intelligent, and one of the nerviest teams in baseball history. The Cubs should and will be good for several seasons.

CANCELS SCHOOL GAME.

The Brown freshmen canceled their game with Morris Heights School to-day to go to New Haven. They would rather watch football than play.

ALL BACHELOR ATHLETIC CLUB

What has turned out to be the most surprising announcement of the season is that the Dorchester Athletic Club, one of the most popular organizations in the Dorchester district, is a bachelors' club.

This announcement was the biggest surprise to the friends and followers of the club around Field's Corner where the club makes its headquarters.

At a private meeting at the home of the club secretary, Edward Costello, John Kane made a motion that the members should make the club one for bachelors only. A roll call proved that the vote was unquestionably in favor of the above motion.

The club made its headquarters at Hough's Neck during the Summer months at the Mascouta.

The club has held many dances, but the banner event will be held Wednesday, December 14, under the direction of J. J. Murnane, president.

A novel dance, "the hobble skirt," is creating no little interest. Richard Lane, John Griffiths, James Coffey, Richard Garvey and Edward Costello will take part in the novel feature.

Edward Grinsoll is now composing a bachelor's song, and, as the boys are saying, "it sure will make a hit."

TOM SHEVLIN SEES VICTORY FOR YALE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5.—"We're going to beat Brown, we're going to beat Princeton by a small score next week and then God help Harvard!" is what Tom Shevlin, Yale's former great football captain, thinks of the Eli's prospects.

COLBY AND MAINE CLASH ON GRIDIRON

WATERVILLE, Me., Nov. 5.—Colby and Maine lineup on Colby field to-day in their annual football game and, although both teams have met defeat, Colby losing to Bowdoin by one point and Maine going down before Bates, unusual interest attaches to this game. There is always strong rivalry between Colby and Maine and the game will be witnessed by a large crowd of friends of both teams.

MICHIGAN CANCELS NOTRE DAME GAME

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 5.—The Board of Control in the University of Michigan has canceled to-day's football game with Notre Dame, the cancellation being because Notre Dame insisted on using Philbrook and Dimmick, whose eligibility has been challenged.

It is understood that this ends all athletic relations between Michigan and Notre Dame.

Boxing Notes

Micky McIntyre is making good in all his local bouts.

Guess that Bob Moha is not a puncher! Tommy Quill will need to be good to beat him November 17.

Frankie Burns will box Jimmy Walsh at 117 pounds at 6 o'clock.

It will be a treat to see Tom O'Rourke handling Sailor Burke against Klauss at the Armory Club next Tuesday.

Al Kaufmann picks up another lemon when he faces Jim Stewart.

Watch for a sensation when Young McGovern faces Joe Egan. The Woburn boy is there with the goods.

Bet a new hat that Nelson and Wolgast will not get together. Both need the money too much.

Abe Attell will make Pal Moore look like a dented nickel.

The new market champion, Jimmy Lyons of Cambridge, is anxious to meet some good middleweight.

Next Tuesday will be Johnny Gallant's first show at the Armory Club since he joined the "mazuma" gatherers.

CUBS' MACHINE TO BE REPAIRED

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—To say that new faces will be on the field when the Cubs begin their 1911 season would be treating the old guard unjustly, but it would be no surprise if some changes were made.

There is a report afloat that Chance will retire to the bench next year and use some of his youngsters for the initial bag. This is not unlikely, but it is a pretty good bet Frank will be covering the first bag when the real work is on next year.

Here are the thirteen youngsters that sure will be given a trial next Spring. Their records as minor leaguers are good, but their worth as big leaguers is still a mystery. Look them over:

Victor A. Sair, infielder, Lansing, Mich.
J. J. ("Scotty") Ingerton, infielder, Altoona, Pa.
James Doyle, infielder, Louisville, Ky.
J. L. ("Pepper") Griffin, pitcher, Atlanta, Ga.
Leo Angemier, catcher, Paris, Ky.
Arthur L. Sewell, catcher, Lincoln, Ill.
Harry Ball, outfielder, Adrian, Mich.
W. B. Kirwan, pitcher, Fond du Lac, Wis.
J. E. Cook, Jr., pitcher, Peoria, Ill.
C. R. ("Ginger" Clarke, pitcher, Waterloo, Ia.
Fred Tony, pitcher, Winchester Club.
Phil Cooney, infielder, Spokane, Wash.
R. T. Fisher, infielder, Danville, Ill.

Every youngster on the list boasts of a minor league "rep."

Two hustling candidates for the shortstop berth are booked to burst upon the scene. One of these is Phil Cooney, the dashing youngster from Spokane, Wash. Deacon Jim McGuire, boss of the Cleveland Club, gave Cooney a brief try-out when the Naps toured the South last Spring, but later turned him back. Fisher, of the Danville Club, comes with the fullest measure of praise from Manager Jack McCarty, a former Cub, and will vie with Cooney for the shoes made famous by Tinker.

The veteran Steinfeldt will have two speedy rivals for steady employment at third. Advance bulletins from Altoona, in the Tri-State League, herald "Scotty" Ingerton as being the most spectacular third sacker that ever sharpened a spike. This noted pastimer, who winters in Peninsula, O., won his medals last season by poling ten home runs and assembling a general batting average of .325 in addition to an enviable record in fielding.

DAN REED, CORNELL'S COACH, RAPS FACULTY

Cornell men are to-day discussing the sensational remarks made by Head Football Coach Dan Reed at the smoker of the Cornell Club of New England at the American House. Reed rapped the faculty and charged that it was doing all in its power to hinder the elevens.

"If football is wholly bad let the faculty abolish it," said Reed; "but if it is good let them back it to the full extent of their ability. Is it fair to the graduates of the university who are asked to come back and coach the teams for the faculty to stand in the way of their development? Such a thing is neither fair to the coaches nor satisfactory to the alumni of Cornell."

A formal vote was taken by the club indorsing Mr. Reed's sentiments in regard to the relations between the faculty and the football team.

AGGIES AND TUFTS CLASH AT MEDFORD

Tufts presents its nearest approach to a regular varsity line-up this season against Massachusetts Agricultural College on the Tufts athletic field, and the College Hill undergraduates are fairly confident that the string of reverses will be broken. Captain Ireland is out of the line-up, but practically all the hospital candidates are in the game for a time at least.

WIND UP DAY OF AUTO RACES

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—The last day's meet at the Speedway for automobiles opened with a light drizzling rain. The program is the best of the meet, and includes the race for the Speedway grand prize, race of 250 miles, $5,000 in prize money, split as follows: First prize, $3,000; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $250; fifth, $150, and sixth, $100. Twenty-six machines are entered for this race.

The Australian pursuit race, a novel plan in which the cars keep running until every car in the race has been passed by the one directly behind it, when it drops out, is second on the list.

A twenty-mile free for all amateur drivers is the third event. Yesterday afternoon Ty Cobb was threatened with ejection from the Speedway grounds when he insisted on privileges for a friend. It is rumored the real reason for calling off the match between Cobb and Nap Rucker was that Cobb stood out for a money prize.

MUTT AND JEFF—WATCH FOR THEM IN TO-MORROW'S BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN—MUTT AND JEFF.

FLETCHER HAS BIG LEAGUE MEN WORRIED

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—D. A. Fletcher of Toledo, who has threatened a third major league for next season, has organized baseball more worried than the magnates care to show. Fletcher himself is not seriously regarded.

He is a personal promoter and admits that he depends upon the capital of others to swing his enterprise. Yet Fletcher is so persistent in his hobby and is so open in his manoeuvres that the powers of baseball have at last begun to take notice.

Fletcher states that he has raised $3,000,000 backing and that he already has secured five of his proposed eight clubs. He is soon coming to New York to open offices, he declares, to be on hand to meet the baseball fraternity at the big December meeting here, at which time, by the way, the National Commission intends to put a crusher on Fletcher and his aspirations.

There is no doubt that Fletcher could rob the two big leagues of the best playing talent if he had the necessary capital, but it would take millions to turn the trick.

Ban Johnson's Start.

Ban Johnson started the American League on a shoestring. It was the moneyed men behind him like Charles Somers, William Yawkey and Frank Farrell that finally enabled Johnson to bring the National League to submission.

The idea of Fletcher putting clubs in major league towns which already have two representatives is ridiculous. Two rival clubs dovetail nicely and improve the sport. Three would be disastrous to all, for that would involve continual conflict in playing dates.

There is a better field outside the East, and those who at all seriously regard Fletcher's skirmishing are convinced that the American association or some part of it could easily be influenced to cast its lot with the Toledo reformer.

For several years now the association has talked war on the majors. George Tebeau has been one of the revolutionists. Joe O'Brien, deposed from the presidency after falling out with Tebeau, has had the war bee in his bonnet for at least two seasons.

By dropping some of the American Association cities for Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburg, the most compact circuit of history could be arranged.

Those four cities have but one major league team each, and any town big enough for one would be bettered by the rivalry of two clubs.

That the National Commission and major leagues are worrying over Fletcher is shown by the alacrity with which big league players have been permitted to barnstorm this Fall.

George Mullin has taken the Detroit Tigers to Cuba, and Frank Bancroft will take the world's champion Athletics to the island later in the Fall.

The present baseball contract which reserves the services of the player for the entire year was directly aimed at barnstorming, which the magnates declared before Fletcher butted into the scene would be a thing of the past this Autumn.

If the necessary capital is forthcoming the players will jump to make the war interesting. Players in general would welcome a war, for that would mean more money to every one.

Of course, organized baseball might meet the demands of the revolutionists. That would mean a test of financial strength and the survival of the fittest.

There is not a player to-day who does not hope that Fletcher will go further than newspaper talk. It is simply a question of his raising money in sufficient quantity to offset the combined surplus of the two major leagues.

With anything less than that sum the Toledo promoter would soon be frozen out.

JAKE STAHL QUITS BASEBALL FOR BANK

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—J. Garland Stahl, better known in the national pastime as Jake, the home-run kid, is through with baseball. It is not one of those Patti swan songs, he says, but a regular retirement to battle with the world at large and the banking problem in particular. The hard-hitting first sacker of the Boston Red Sox authorized the announcement of the instantaneous transition.

This isn't one of those phoney farewells, according to Jake. He has amassed a snug nest egg which has been applied to the grand sinking fund of the Washington Park National Bank in this city.

The directors of this institution will meet to-morrow to elect a president, vice-president and other officers. Jake isn't out for any office.

YANKEE TEAM WINS TWENTY-MILE RACE

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. — The American team, composed of Hans Holmer and William Queal, won the twenty mile international foot race in Madison Square Garden in the world's record time of 1 hour, 20 minutes, 47 seconds, 4 minutes, 23 4-5 seconds better than the previous mark.

The Canadian team, Fred Meadows and Abbie Woods, was second and the Swedish team, Gus Ljungstrom and John Svanberg, third.

"SMITHY" JUDGE AT FLORIDA RACE MEETS

E. C. Smith, who directed the races at the Country Club, Brookline, two years ago and made himself immensely popular with the amateur riders, has been chosen to serve as associate judge and secretary for the Winter racing at Pensacola and Tampa, Fla. "Smithy" should have a great season among the tourists who try on the West Florida coast every Winter. He knows the racing game from the head waters, and the meetings under his direction should be of the best.

UP TO CLARKE TO DISPOSE OF WAGNER

PITTSBURG, Nov. 5. — "If Manager Clarke sees fit to dispose of Hans Wagner he has my permission. I will make no objection. We want and must have a winning club."

This was one of the remarks made to-day by President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg team. His statements all tended to verify the report that Wagner will probably not be with the Pirates next year.

NEW YORKER AGAIN WINS AT BILLIARDS

NEW YORK, Nov 5.—William Blumenthal won his fourth straight game for the New York team in the national amateur billiard tournament, defeating Dave Louderback, who represented Brooklyn, by the score of 50 to 35.

CROSS STEPS OUT OF HAS-BEEN CLASS

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Leach Cross, the dentist lightweight of the East Side, took one step out of the "has been" class when he gave Jack Dorman a bad beating in a ten-round bout before the Fairmont Athletic Club. Dorman stayed the limit, but that was all. He was out-fought and out-generalled.

BELVASIA GOES TO GLORY SALE

The announcement that Belvasia, 2:12¾, the crack four-year-old trotting mare of New England, and who is by Bingara, dam Persea by Pistachio, 2:21⅛, has been consigned to the Old Glory sale by the owner, D. W. Caton, has caused considerable comment among local horsemen.

No four-year-old trotting mare ever started in New England has attracted as much notice as Belvasia, who won nine consecutive races this season, all in which she started, and lost but one heat.

It has been many a day since a New England twice-around has seen so much speculation as the day upon which Belvasia took the measure of Scientia, the crack son of Admiral Dewey, 2:04¾. The boys began making it $60 to $45 that Fred Hyde's stallion could turn the trick, and the selling was enormous. Then Belvasia came back and trimmed Veizora, the New Hampshire mare, in another race, making two $1,000 stakes that the daughter of Bingara had annexed in a single week, and she could have romped away with a third had one been opened to which she was eligible.

It was reported at Hills Grove that Mr. Caton refused an offer of $7,500 for Belvasia, and what price she will bring at the sale is the cause of much discussion among local horsemen. Belvasia is a natural, square-gaited trotter, the smoothest four-year-old bred in New England in many years, and she showed her ability to turn a mile track this year in 2:07.

LEWIS KNOCKS OUT YOUNG DONOGHUE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 5.—Billy Lewis of Concord knocked out Young Donoghue of Lawrence in seven rounds in their bout at the Queen City A. C. to-night. The bouts were all ten rounds and were refereed by Owen Kenny.

Young McDonough of this city made a punching bag of Eddie Golden of Albany. Kid Sheehan of this city lost to Tommy Furey in ten rounds.

It was announced that a benefit would be held for Patsy Sweeney of this city, some years ago one of the best in the lightweight division, who is now broken down in health. Some good boxers in the light and welterweight class will box in his behalf.

SONOMA GIRL LAME; OUT OF TEXAS RACES

Incident to the retirement from the American turf of Miss Lotta Crabtree's crack brown trotting mare Sonoma Girl 2.04¼, as reported in the AMERICAN, comes the news from Texas that the great daughter of Lynwood W. has pulled up very lame. This will prevent her being started by Dick McMahon at the coming race meeting at Phoenix, Ari., where she was expected to burn up the track upon the alkali plain for a new mark around 2.02.

Ross K., 2:01½, is also laid up with a severe strain of the left hind pastern, so that things are breaking none too well on the Crescent belt for Dick McMahon.

LEMOINE INJURED CALLS BOUT OFF

WEBSTER, Nov. 5.—Maurice Lemoine, the Webster welterweight, who was scheduled to meet Jimmie Moriarty of Lowell before the Lakeside A. C., November 8, severely wrenched his back while training with Jeff Dougherty in his quarters and will be unable to meet Moriarty. Dougherty will be substituted.

LADY STATELY SOLD; GOES ACROSS WATER

Lady Stately, 2:06¼, the bay trotting mare, who looked so good in Lon McDonald's string during the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville, has been sold by the old Boston reinsman to Ossiano Giacchimo of Florence, Italy, and has already been shipped abroad.

REGATTA PUT OVER.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5. — Rough water has caused the postponement of Yale's annual Fall regatta to some time next week.

MAINE HUNTERS PRAY FOR SNOW

By Dick Carpenter.

The weather is playing all manner of tricks with the Maine sportsmen. For weeks warm weather with no rain made the woods as noisy as the Arena when the day racers begin a sprint. But this week snow came into the "away up" districts. For a minute everyone was tickled to death. Then a slight thaw set in, followed by cold weather, with the result that around the Sebec Lake and Moosehead woods sections a heavy crust formed.

Now everyone wants either a heavier snow fall or more warm weather, for as the woods now are, a man walking through the crust gives a wonderfully good imitation of a small boy setting off a bunch of firecrackers.

For all that, the shipments into the big cities continue to run high. Up to now the deer killed approximate 1,150, the moose an even fifty-five and the bear fifteen. These figures come from the wardens who check up the game at the various stations. This year, however, much game is going out of the State in automobiles and these are seldom checked up.

Warren E. Cobb of Caribou has shipped in a moose head that looks like a record. It has a spread of fifty-five inches. B Matthews of Brookline also sent in a fine looking deer a few days ago.

Deer Scarce in Vermont.

Just now the Vermont and New Hampshire gunners are having their innings. In Vermont the conditions for shooting are not of the best, and reports say there is a scarcity of deer. At the same time 175 deer have been killed, Washington county leading with twenty-seven. Several bear and a number of foxes have also been bagged.

The open season for deer in Grafton and Carroll counties is now on and runs until the middle of next month. The shooting in Coos county opened the first of October. The open season in the other seven counties will begin with the first of December and continue for fifteen days.

The Coos county season, by the way, closes on November 30. This early closing in Coos, the most northern of the counties, is due to the fact that by the first of December there is usually a heavy fall of snow in the woods and the deer begin to yard. If hunting were permitted it would mean an early extermination of the deer.

The Oxford City Citizen at Bethel, Me., tells in this manner of a delayed hunting trip:

"Deputy Sheriff Small visited Bert Gordon's place in Peru and found five gallons of whiskey in pint bottles, stored in suit cases and hidden under the hay in the barn.

"Gordon was arrested for keeping with intent to sell. He claims, however, that with two other men he was about to go on a hunting trip. He probably intended to go through the wood and place a series of deer traps baited with pint bottles. This would have been an easy way to get deer compared with the old-fashioned method of tramping through the heavy underbrush in search of them.

"However, Judge Stearns could not forget that Gordon has twice served time. He sent him to jail in South Paris for four months. In the meantime the deer were informed that Gordon would not visit them this season.

$300,000 IN PURSES FOR MEXICO RACES

The AMERICAN is in receipt of the prospectus of the Winter racing at Juarez, Mexico, which will continue for 100 days, with the opening November 24. The offerings in stakes and purses aggregate $300,000, with fifty stake events carded, which means $3,000 a day for the boys who dare to venture the land of the gringos. Special rates are offered for patrons with through tickets reading from New York, Pimlico, Louisville and Latonia.

SNAP YOUR GAME AND WIN A PRIZE

THE BOSTON AMERICAN will give a high grade Winchester rifle or shotgun of the latest model, manufactured by the Winchester Arms Company, for the best photograph of live game birds or big game taken before December 15 next.

For the second best picture received a camera will be awarded.

The clearness of the picture and the "action" shown will figure largely in making the awards. The names of the judges who will decide the winners will be printed within a short time.

CROKER AFTER ENGLISH DERBY

A letter to the AMERICAN from the Hotel Cecil in London declares that Richard Croker is going after the English Derby again, and has a very promising candidate in the two-year-old colt Clonbern, by Clonmel. The Sage of Wantage has had this colt given a thorough "course in sprouts," according to London advices, and the Croker candidate can reel off the halves at around .53.

The opinion of the boys who gather around the "pubs" across the water seems to be that if the Croker colt has the stamina he may fill the bill, for he right sure has the speed.

Hundreds of Americans will wish Croker well, for New York has seemed a desert since he quit the Democratic Club on Fifth avenue, to those few here in town who were on the old leader's calling card. Everybody will remember how Richard Croker won the English Derby with Orby in 1907, and there will be thousands upon thousands of best wishes in America that he may repeat at Epsom Downs with Clonbern in 1911.

SHIP AILEEN WILSON TO WINTER QUARTERS

Aileen Wilson, 2:02½, the crack pacing mare owned by John W. Coakley of the Hotel Langham, and who has been dangerously ill with pneumonia at the Hills Grove track, is so much better as to warrant her being shipped early in the week to Winter quarters. The little black beauty, the fastest pacing speed mistress ever owned in Boston, had a close call, and the popular South End owner has received many congratulations upon her safe recovery.

Plans are already under way at Hills Grove for the racing season of 1911. There will be no $1,000 stakes opened for the early meeting in July, but several of the $1,000 jackpots will be offered for the August and September meetings next year.

WHEELER WILL HEAD METROPOLITAN GOLF

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The nominating committee of the Metropolitan golf association has selected Frederick S. Wheeler, the vice president, to succeed President A. H. Larkin; James L. Taylor is slated for vice president and Wynant D. Vanderpool is renominated for secretary. Mortimer N. Buckner is the nominee for treasurer. The executive committee named is Findlay S. Douglas, Harry V. Keep, Joseph P. Knapp, John M. Ward and John Reis, Jr.

FERNS LOSES BOUT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. — Charley Lawrence defeated Harry Ferns in the main 10-round bout at the Lehigh A. C. to-night. Lawrence had a decided advantage in eight of the ten rounds. In the last two rounds Ferns was in distress on several occasions.

BOWLING STAR OUT FOR TITLE

By Ed. Cogswell.

Look out, all you champion bowlers, or nearby champions, because there is sure a lot of trouble brewing. The bogey man is none other than Frank L. Herrington of the Faneuil team in the Commercial Bottle Pin League, and he talks to any bowler in New England.

Herrington called around to the AMERICAN office with the object of announcing his defi in terms that will make the cracks toe the line in short order, or take a back seat in admitting they are unable to make good.

Now, Herrington says he has been reading a whole lot in the papers as to who is the champion all-round bowler of Greater Boston, meaning the best at bottle, candle and the duck pins, but in none of the accounts has he seen his own name mentioned.

While the bottle pins are Herrington's stronghold, he having bowled them in most of the big cities in the country with the best, and prefers that style of game, yet he is clever with the candles and ducks.

Feeling that he can more than hold his own, he challenges any bowler for the all-round championship of New England. If this defi is accepted by any of the stars residing in Providence, Worcester, Portland, Lowell, or other cities, he agrees to play a series of home and home matches at the three styles of bowling.

Asked if he included Bill Beatty and Fred Williams in his challenge, his reply was that nobody was barred, besides, it was an even money bet that neither of the men named would come to the front in taking up the proposition.

Herrington's statement is clean cut and leaves it up to the stars as to whether he gets away with it without a chance of proving his mettle.

BOWLING ALLEY GOSSIP

The latest out is the Inter-State Bowling League, comprising the Hubs of Attleboro, Academys of North Attleboro, Auditoriums of Pawtucket, Brunswicks of Woonsocket, Music Halls of Taunton, and the Infantry Hall, Weybosset and Congress Fives of Providence. The schedule calls for twenty-eight weeks, and the opening matches will be next Thursday night. The pins used will be the ducks.

Down at Middleboro they are having a lot of sport with the ducks. The Whittenton team of Taunton recently visited there and were obliged to bow to defeat at the hands of the Middleboros to the tune of 1,379 to 1,356, the latter winning two out of the three strings. In the final string Whittenton let to the last box, losing by only two pins. Hollis was high bowler with 120.

Local bowlers are wondering if Fred Williams intends accepting the challenge from Hill and Curtis of North Adams in which the latter agrees to pay all expenses up there and return to Boston. Paul Poehler says he feels that local pride should be enough not to permit the defi to pass unnoticed.

George Holmes of Brockton now has the title of State and national duck pin holder, he having in league competition rolled a total of 445, his strings being 169, 147 and 120. The best previous record was 407, made by Clark of the Crescents, who was a star in the Boston City League two seasons ago. Tommy Luckman, Tony O'Boy, Frank Ferris and Captain G. E. Horton have all passed the 400 mark, but not in league competition. Holmes made his record playing with the Walkovers against the Bijous. He made three strikes in succession and hit the head pin in every one of the thirty boxes.

BOWLING RETURNS IN THE AMERICAN

SECRETARIES of bowling leagues in Greater Boston are requested to send to the BOSTON AMERICAN complete schedules of their matches as soon as arranged, and the official scorers are asked to mail the standing of the clubs early each week. Proprietors of bowling alleys are invited to forward a list of the leagues using their alleys. Bowling news of the teams or individuals participating in the sport is welcomed at all times, and will be published.

Address Bowling Editor, The Boston American.

BIG WRESTLING TOURNEY HERE

Hjalmar Lundin, the Swedish heavyweight wrestler, comes to Boston to-morrow to finish up training for his handicap match with Dr. Ben Roller, which takes place at the Arena Monday night. Lundin is always in great shape, but for the coming battle he has been preparing hard ever since the articles were signed.

So confident is he that he will win that he has agreed to meet George Hackenschmidt a week later at New Haven. The fact that Lundin has been picked to meet the Russian Lion is in itself significant and indicates Lundin's class.

Roller writes that he, too, will arrive in Boston certain that he will win and thus advance a notch toward the championship of the world.

The three preliminaries will bring together representatives of various nations. Bob Somerville, world's 130-pound champion, will represent Scotland against Young Gotch of America. Ali Hassan, the Assyrian, whose style is somewhat like Perelli's, will have Berger Karlstrom of Quincy, who carries the Swedish colors, while in the other Young Jenkins of Worcester will be Yankeeland's member against Edmund Schultz, a German.

As a special attraction Henri Gaudet, the French miniature Sandow, will give a demonstration of physical culture. Gaudet is said to be the finest developed 125-pound man in the world.

WALSH AND ATTELL TO CLASH NOV. 23

Jimmy Walsh and Monte Attell are to meet on November 23. The local fans, no doubt would like nothing better than to see this famous pair of gamecocks show their skill with the padded mitts, but unfortunately it is not going to be their privilege, as the match is to be fought at Kansas City.

It's a case of the Hub's loss and the Missouri town's gain this time. Monte Attell is a brother of the famous Abe, the holder of the featherweight title, is one of the best bantams ever produced in California, and considering the long list of great little men turned out from this State, that is saying considerable.

The last time Jimmy Walsh was out on the Pacific coast the fans of San Francisco say a fast fifteen-round draw between this same pair of whirlwinds.

WILLIE HOPPE WINS MATCH WITH CARTER

At Yatter's studio Willie Hoppe, the world's champion at billiards, played George Carter. Carter made 176 to Hoppe's 400. Hoppe's highest run was 80 and Carter's 39. Hoppe averaged 22 4-18 and Carter 9 8-18.

DON'T WORRY OVER FOSS OR DRAPER!

The election of either Foss or Draper on Tuesday next is conceded by nearly everybody. One of them is certain to kick into the job of running the State of Massachusetts for the ensuing year.

So don't worry any more about it. Let it go as it lays. Save your worry for yourself. Worry over your next suit of clothes or overcoat to the extent of coming to a decision as to what tailor is going to build it.

If we do the job for you it will cost you just $15 to $25 for suit or overcoat. If we build it you can stop worrying, as we guarantee our patrons against worry or loss of sleep. Open late tonight. Come in and get measured.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

Realities Instead of Ideals

By DOROTHY DIX

PROBABLY the only way to solve the problem of how to make happiness in matrimony a dead sure thing, instead of the hundred-to-one shot that it is now, is to bring the question of marriage down out of the clouds and put it on a practical basis.

In reality, marriage is, primarily, a business proposition that involves issues of the most material sort. When a man marries he goes into a partnership that he swears he never will break, no matter whether it turns out well or ill. He assumes obligations that he can never honorably repudiate. He takes upon himself the burden of supporting an indefinite number of people.

When a woman marries, she settles her fate so far as this world's goods and chattels are concerned, because she cuts herself off equally from what she might earn herself if she had stayed single, and from marrying some other man who might provide for her better than the one she has chosen.

Marriage means all of this financially to both men and women, and yet we ignore this business side of it, and persist in regarding it from the sentimental standpoint.

If a callow young couple think they are in love they rush into matrimony, even though they haven't a penny to bless themselves with, and people who are sane enough on other subjects applaud them and pat them on the back for doing it, instead of having them committed to the nearest lunatic asylum.

Stomach Beats Heart

Of course, such a marriage almost invariably turns out a failure, because, as we are unfortunately constituted, we are more stomach than heart, and only in poetry and novels can one feed upon romance.

In real life, the possession of the most intense devotion to another does not prevent us from getting cold and hungry, and desiring to keep up with the fashions.

It is an established fact that nobody can take the proper interest in love making when his or her appetite is clamoring for beefsteak and onions, nor can any romance survive the hounding of the bill collector. For any marriage to be happy, it must have sufficient financial backing at least to provide the necessities and a few of the frills of existance.

In view of this it is nothing short of a crime that we should teach young people that love is enough to marry on. It isn't enough, by a long shot. Love without enough money to live decently on is a shorter cut to the divorce court than marriage with money and without love.

Undoubtedly the chances of matrimonial happiness would be enormously increased if the wolf did not howl outside of so many doors; if, before a man asked a girl to marry him, he reflected upon whether a salary that barely supported him would support a wife and twins, and if the girl considered the question of whether she was making a good trade in giving up her $75 job for a $40 husband, and exchanging three square meals a day for a diet of bread and water, with a certainty of getting only the water.

Marry Realties

The trouble is that we have thrown a glamour about matrimony that makes young people who have never tried it think of the holy estate as one in which people are lifted above the ordinary needs of life, and when they find that this isn't true, and that after marriage they are just as hungry, and just as much interested in pleasures and amusements as they were before, why, it is apt to give those who have rushed in unprepared a jolt from which they never recover.

If marriage was always painted as a stern reality, a cold, hard business proposition, requiring both capital and labor, to be carried off successfully, we should have fewer weddings, but they would be happier ones.

Another great aid to matrimonial felicity would be for men and women to try to marry real men and women instead of the fancy sketches their fancies have painted.

It is the custom for the disillusioned man, when he finds out that the Mary Jane he has got is no more like the Mary Jane he thought he led to the altar than a chromo is like an ivory miniature, to beat on his breast and cry out, "I have been duped, taken in, sold out, goldbricked."

If he has, it is a case of self-hypnosis. Poor Mary Jane never consciously posed as an angel without wings. She never pretended to be an ethereal creature who could live on dew, and whose thoughts were so set on the higher things that she failed to perceive the imported hats, and hand-made shirt waists in the shop windows.

How to Avoid Reno

The fault with the man was in not rubbing the mists of sentiment out of his eyes, and taking a good long squint at Mary Jane and perceiving that she was a very human woman, with a good, healthy appetite, a quick temper, and a ready tongue, with the usual feminine weaknesses and inconsistencies, and subject to the usual feminine desire for clothes, but, withal, with a great, big, loving heart, and a loyalty, and a helpfulness that more than counterbalanced her follies.

Women make the same mistake, and make it more gorgeously than men, because a woman has an especial talent for idealizing. No woman ever sees the man she marries as he is before she marries him. She won't look at him, but keeps her eyes fixed on the impossible little tin god she has created out of her fancies. Then, when the time comes that she discovers that her godling has not only feet of clay, but legs of mud, she throws him all the way to Reno.

How many tears and how much alimony could be saved if, on the safe side of the altar, a woman would come down to brass tacks and just realize that the plain, honest, industrious, hard-headed business man she was marrying was never going to be romantic, or use highfalutin' language, and didn't have a thrill about his person, yet he was willing to work his fingers to the bones to make her comfortable, and would think that she was the most beautiful human being that ever lived to his dying day.

Half of the matrimonial misery in the world is the disastrous result of people being guided by their imaginations instead of their heads. It's hard enough, heaven knows, to live up to the best that is in us, but it is impossible to live up to the ideal that another has created for us.

The Dog on the String

By FRANCIS L. GARSIDE

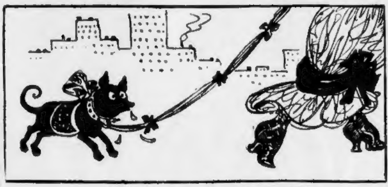
AT the twilight hour, when a woman in a normal-sized town walks to the corner to call her children home, and later returns with her little brood, their arms around her and all talking at once, the city woman ties a dog to the other end of a string and goes for a walk.

And it is in behalf of the dog tied to the other end of the string that this is written.

When the pup, with his awkward legs and his jolly way of tumbling over himself arrives in a normal-sized town, one can tell by looking at him what kind of a dog he is going to be. For in such a town, Nature has her way, but if the same pup is put in a flat in the city, the shadow of the future years of suppression and dejection envelops him, and within six weeks his own mother couldn't tell if he is going to be a lap dog or a bull terrier. And no one ever finds out, for Nature, running against the flat life environment, gives one shriek and flees, leaving the pup to a nameless fate.

He lives on the sixth floor, with a fire-escape for a playground, when his God-intended home is a house and a yard.

Having no home to protect, he loses his sense of guardianship, the mission for which he was originally created.



He sees life tied to the other end of a string.

There are no stray cats to chase, no trespassing dogs to be driven off his domain, no passer-by to be barked at with the protecting fence between. Born to all the joys of dog life that go with such a home, he becomes part of one that is put on a mover's van.

He knows nothing of the mysterious voices of the night. The sound of the elevator in his flat and the rumble of the cars outside take the place of the whispering of the leaves, the fluttering of the birds in their nests, the voice of the wakeful cat that must be chased home, the stray footfall of the man going home late that must be investigated; the countless false alarms that nature provides to make him alert.

He knows nothing of the master creation of all to bark at, for he has never seen the moon.

He loses all sense of thrift and proprietorship, having no yard in which to bury a bone.

He is doctored out of a book, and acquires all sorts of book diseases, being denied the grass and herbs which nature provided to heal him.

He is bathed in the bathtub instead of in the pond, and the grass which grew on purpose to be his towel is supplanted by something that came from a dry goods store.

He has never chased a rabbit and goes through life drearily, knowing no invitations of the seasons

He can't wag his tail; there isn't room for such emotion in a flat.

He is dejected, suppressed, a misplaced creature without a bark of welcome or a growl of suspicion. He becomes a door mat without as much life as the one bearing the word "Welcome."

He sees life tied to the other end of a string, part of a dreary evening procession that consists of feet that shuffle below a hobble skirt, and a thing called a dog.

He goes through life with his tail at half-mast.

He becomes a symbol of the future perfect man—a creature that never appears in public except when some woman ties him to the other end of a string.

The Kittenish Old Lady

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

DON'T—don't—DON'T be a kittenish old lady! Don't try to carry your youth into old age to the extent that it makes you ridiculous.

Ordinarily, I don't preach or moralize. But this time I can't resist a little homily on preserving the dignity of age.

I have just seen an example of old age made into a grotesque travesty of youth. It was at a tea. She came elaborately dressed in an electric blue velvet gown and a large blue velvet hat with white plumes. It would have been an exquisite costume for a woman of thirty, but, for a woman of sixty!

Her hair was plainly dyed and generously supplemented with false puffs into a most imposing edifice (if that word can be applied to a structure built of hair). Her cheeks and lips were rouged and her nose so thickly powdered that it resembled a frosted cake.

With a rustle of silk and a whiff of French perfume, she sat down near me. And then she began to talk—gushingly, effusively, and with the affected, kittenish air of a young girl.

An Object of Pity

Every one was watching her. She made herself at once the centre of observation. Evidently she was wealthy and, as I understood later, she entertained most lavishly. From those who are always willing to pay homage to wealth, she received much attention. The others pitied her.

She had good features and had once been a very beautiful woman. And had she now let her face be softened by her natural gray or white hair, left off the rouge and dressed quietly in soft grays or black, she would have been a very charming old lady.

But she was desperately trying to hold to her youth. She was still seeking the admiration she had once received. Undoubtedly, it is much harder for a beautiful woman to grow old than for a homely one—she has so much more to lose.

It is very hard for her to give up that personal admiration she has always had. And she makes the absurd mistake of thinking she can still have it with the aid of paint, powder, false hair and gay clothes!

On the stage with the help of the footlights and the distance, these artifices may give a semblance of youth. I suppose that is why so many women think that they can carry the illusion into real life. But they can't. Stand within talking distance of any "made up" old lady, and you will find that she has not taken one year from her age, but instead, has hardened and coarsened her face.

The Futility of Make-Up

This is not a preachment against paint and hair dye from any moral standpoint. If I thought they helped in the least toward the effacing of the marks of years, I would say use them, use them unsparingly and always.

There is nothing in life so valuable to a woman as her youth. And I would approve of her keeping it, restoring it, counterfeiting it in any way she can. And if paint and hair dye would do it there would be no more ardent advocate of paint and hair dye than I. But, unfortunately, they won't. They only detract from her refinement and womanliness, and take not one year from her age.

If the coy and kittenish manner of a girl of sixteen would make a woman of sixty seem one day younger, then by all means let her be coy and kittenish. But al the women I have met who have attempted to simulate youth in this way have only succeeded in making themselves ridiculous.

Age, old age, is the cruelest thing that life brings to women. Within her heart no woman ever really "grows old gracefully." Secretly, she greets each year with bitterness and heartaches.

But at least, if she cannot retain her youth, she can retain her womanliness and her dignity. If she cannot have the admiration she once had, she can at least escape the ridicule and pity she will surely invite if she is "made up" in either appearance or manner.

Letters of a Bride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAREST MUMSIE:

It is ages since I have written you and you are such an angel about writing me that I feel ashamed of myself, but I won't let a whole week pass without writing again.

I have not told you about the Dentons' dinner, have I?

Well, it was perfectly lovely. Their house is so beautiful and everything was so well done and it was so exciting being the guest of honor. Mr. Denton took me in to dinner and everything was lovely to me.

I wore my wedding dress and Bobby, the angel, sent me a great bunch of moss roses. Wasn't it dear of him? It made me feel as though I were a girl again and just in the process of falling madly in love with my Bobby.

And now, Mumsie, I must tell you something that rather disturbs me:

We were a little late getting to the Dentons as they live ten miles away, and we had a puncture going over. I was so nervous when I went into the drawing room and there were so many people that I really did not see any one but Mr. and Mrs. Denton. Dinner was announced at once and we went right out.

After we were seated and Mr. Denton had said one or two pretty things about our being such an acquisition to the neighborhood, etc., a voice on the other side of me said quietly: "Well, Mrs. Peggy, aren't you going to speak to me?"

I turned around and there sitting on my left was, who do you think, Mumsie, Mr. Sinclair.

I really was most awfully glad to see him for I felt shy and Mr. Denton is rather formidable, you know, he is so old and pompous.

Perhaps I should not have seemed quite so glad to see Mr. Sinclair, but I would have been glad to see any one that I knew and felt at home with.

We talked about heaps of things and were having a lovely time reminiscing when I suddenly caught Bobby's eye. He was sitting far down the table on Mrs. Denton's right.

Mumsie, he looked as black as a thunder cloud.

I stopped short right in the middle of a story and Mr. Sinclair said, "What's the matter? Don't you feel well?"

Then his eyes followed mine and such a funny little smile came over his face.

"Oh, I see," he said quietly.

"See what," I said crossly.

But he only kept on smiling in such a horrid way, it made me hate him. My pleasure in the dinner was quite gone. Mumsie, is it possible that Bobby could be so silly as to be jealous?

I can't help it if Mr. Sinclair wanted to marry me. I chose Bobby instead and that ought to be enough to prove to Bobby that I love him and him only. But I can't sit next a man at dinner and never speak to him.

After dinner, while we women were in the drawing room, Mrs. Denton asked me to sing.

I didn't feel a bit like it, but I did not know how to get out of it, so I was singing when the men came in.

I sang the song Bobby loves best of all, "Absence." I sang it just for him, but he walked straight over to the other side of the room and joined a group of women. Mumsie, I could have cried.

I was so glad when our motor was announced.

Bobby never spoke a word the first mile or two and then I couldn't stand it another moment. I slipped my hand into his and said: Dearest, have I done anything wrong?"

His arms were around me in a moment and he was calling himself all sorts of hard names.

I had a lovely, comfy little cry on his shoulder. It was so nice making up. But Bobby says he will never be jealous again.

I told him I loved him so well that every other man on earth seemed nothing. Since then everything has been perfect, but, Mumsie, I'm troubled about just one thing.

Mr. Sinclair asked if he might call if he were in the neighborhood and of course I said yes. What else could I say?

Do you think Bobby will mind? I could tell Norah to say I was not at home, but it would be too silly and Bobby must not get such ridiculous ideas into his head; he must trust me as I do him.

Good-bye, darling, it is such a comfort to tell you everything just as I have always done. Love to my dear daddy, and a thousand kisses for both of your.

Your loving daughter,

PEGGY CATON.

Tow-Head Jones

By Kennett Harris

"DON'T you do no such a crool, barbarious thing, sweet child," the stock-tender admonished the Circle-Bar-Y boy. "Them actions leads to pickin' the legs an' wings off poor little harmless bugs when you grow older."

He stirred his castile suds vigorously for a moment or two and then continued: "Another thing is, she may not care a flicker of a lamb's tail whether you take her to the dance or not. You can't most always sometimes tell about these very tender, trusting hearts. They sure take a heap of busting once in a while by us gay widdies. You wasn't in Crawford when Tow-head Jones sent East for his girl, was you?"

"If you say 'Crawford' to me, I'll paint your eye a lovelier Irish than any burnished dove ever sported," growled the Circle-Bar-Y boy. "I want to tell you right now that if they hadn't hid my gun——"

"I never seen such a sensitive, high-strung person as you are," said the stock-tender. "All it takes to get you red-eyed is a few thoughtless words from a giddy female or a plug deputy. Never mind, buddy, I won't say anything more, only I want to tell you about Tow-head and his girl.

Tow-Head and the Girl

"I used to know Tow-head when he was riding for the Z-Bell, and he was a great hand to get confidential about the girl he'd got waiting for him 'way back in Ioway. This was a special and particular kind of a girl, this one was. She could have had her choice of anything male from Muscatine to Sioux City, according to Tow-head, but she was dead stuck on him and there wasn't nothing else would do her if she had to wait till Brimstone Lake got to be a popular Summer resort.

"Tow-head didn't feel right about her sacrificing herself that-a-way, neither. 'What chance has she got with me, dubbing around over the alkali at forty per and find my own saddle and drinks?' he says in a plaintive way. 'How do you suppose I'll ever amass enough moidores to fetch her out here? Poor, poor little girl!' says he. 'I know dern well how she's a-yearning for the touch of my vanished hand and how my bright smile haunts her still. Ain't it hellanrepeat for her!'

"I know it might be worse for her, but I've got a genius for keeping my countenance close at times. But Tow-head mourned about it for two seasons, at the end of which time he quit because Al Dearduff told him he'd better. He drifted off down into the Panhandle an' then came up with horses in the Summer of '88, and the next thing you know, he was running a perfectly round wheel in Joe Madeary's at Crawford.

"'It begins to look a little brighter for Birdie,' says Tow-head to me when he'd scooped in my last chip. 'There's a rainbow of promise a-stretching acrost the horryzon and gladdening her straining eyes. If nothing happens and Crawford doesn't get to writhing in the convulsions of a moral spasm hard enough to jolt my wheel into the courthouse basement, Birdie's being is shortly going to thrill to the music of my mellow voice.'

"'Going to send for her?' I asked him.

"'If you boys stay in town a couple of days longer I sure will,' says Tow-head.

"Being broke myself, I felt sort of reckless and induced the boys to stay. The result was that Tow-head acted like a sport and a gentleman and sent a bank draft to Creston, or wherever it was. It hadn't no sooner gone through before Tow-head began to have misgivings.

"'It isn't only that this is a-going to call for the whole roll,' he says. 'Let 'er roll is my motto, by which I abide. The point is, that I'm told this marriage game isn't all it's cracked up to be. I'm informed that the rules stipulate for regular hours and irregular chores and all manner of other games of chance is prohibited. Birdie might want me to be a gentle granger as like as not. Think of me robbing cows of the milk kind heaven meant for the nourishment of their own offspring and massacreing pulpy potato bugs!'

Cold Feet

"'That ain't by no means the way you ought to look at it,' I says. 'Think of being decent and respectable and having hubbard squash in the cellar all Winter.'

"'If it wasn't that I knew her faithful heart would break, I'd wire her to keep the money and call all side bets off,' says Tow-head, gloomily.

"'If you done any such a trick as that I'd consider myself in the light of Birdie's big brother and dance the Spanish fandango on your still quivering carcass,' I told him."

"'I don't mind admitting to you that I wasn't quite myself when I sent off that letter,' he says. 'I don't say that I was ory-eyed, but I'd had one or two consecutively.'

"'I'll never tell Birdie, if that's what you want me to promise,' I told him."

"He didn't say anything to that; only sighed and walked away. The next morning there was a little vacant chair at the Palace hash house and a sagging-eyed Mexican stacking up chips and spinning the marble in at Joe Madeary's.

Tow-head's Passing

"Tow-head had taken to himself the wings of the morning, being the cat-hammed sorrel he always rid, and was far, far away. I never seen him since."

"Where does the moral come in?" asked the Circle-Bar-Y boy.

"The moral is that he might jest as well have stayed," replied the stocktender. "Birdie came in on the afternoon stage, and if it wasn't impolite I'd say that she had moulted quite a considerable. She certainly wasn't no squab. Naturally she didn't meet Tow-head, but she did meet with a raft of sympathy.

"After she'd gone to the Palace the boys adjourned to Joe's to talk it over, and the more they talked the more sympathetic they got. Finally they concluded that if they started right out they would ketch up with Tow-head at Beatty's Crossing or Sweetwater by riding all night.

"'We'll bring the son-of-a-gun back to face the music,' they says. But first they decided to notify Birdie that she could dry her weeping eyes and pound her shell-like ear peacefully till morning, with the happy assurance that the loved one would return pretty quick or pretty dead.

"They found her in the ladies' parlor at the Palace, flushed with the exertion of her appetite on a mess of pork and greens, but otherwise tolerable serene, and they informed her of their condolences and their manly and virtuous intentions in the premises and off them, regarding Tow-head.

Birdie Lands

"'Gentlemen,' says Birdie, 'I trust it ain't necessary to tell you of the gratitude that wells in my stricken bosom, but I reckon you might as well let Adolphus go and keep going. My damask cheek ain't going to suffer much corroding on his account. Since I've been here I've had the offer of a position as lady cashier in Mr. Nathan Einstein's Bon-Ton store at $14 per week. Mr. Shortly West has gone Mr. Einstein $2 better for my services as Lady cook in the Gem Kaif.

"'Sundry and divers other citizens has raised them propositions, and I have finally called Mr. and Mrs. Gantz here in $18 as general, all-around assistant and sub-boss. It seems to me that any woman who can draw down $18 a week and board has mighty little use for a husband. That's the way I look at it, anyway.'"

"I reckon she was right," commented the Circle-Bar-Y boy.

"There ain't no doubt of it," replied the stocktender. "And yet," he concluded, "inside of a month she married a greasy old sour-dough prospector from Ruby Basin without a cent or a second shirt to his name."

Desperate Desmond

CURSES! CLAUDE MUST DIE, THAT'S ALL!
YO HEAVE HO!
SAVED BY THE TOILERS OF THE SEA. DESMOND IS FOILED AND ROSAMOND WILL BE MINE AGAIN
NOW TO OVERPOWER THE CREW, HA, HA, HA.
D—! H—!!?
FAREWELL ROSAMOND, BUT I HATE YOU DESMOND!
HOLD STEADY, BOYS!
SAVED AGAIN. NOW TO BRING THE DESMOND TO JUSTICE!

If Desmond could have his way, Claude Eclaire would be at the bottom of the sea by this time, but the villain can't buck against our hero's luck. To be sure, it's a bit humiliating to be hauled in with a bunch of fish, but it's better than a death 'neath the ocean wave, anyhow.

Please remember that Desmond is still in the game. He isn't going to let Claude escape so easily when he can queer the rescue by the simple method of swatting a fisherman in the whiskers with the main boom, whereupon the fisherman drops the rope and Claude takes another dive.

Can you beat that for luck? Along comes a dredging machine and picks little Claude up again! The fish are still with him. They'd rather be back in the briny, but nobody seems to consider their feelings, although they are in the majority. It's grossly unjust, but what can you do about it?

Did you think we had succeeded in shaking Desmond? Not so; he still controls the cable attached to the fishing net, and he's going to yank Claude and the fish right out of that dredging scoop. At least, he thinks he is, and as for us we don't see what's going to stop him. Do you?

Looks like some more of that sad sea wave stuff for our bold young hero, doesn't it? Well, he has to take things as they come, but we don't mind telling you that he is getting rather tired of associating with those fish. Besides, what's the use of saving a man from a watery grave and then dropping him in again?

Ah! Now we see the idea. By closing the scoop after the net has dropped through the dredgers get a bulldog grip on the cable, and Desperate Desmond is foiled again. What will that cowardly cur do next? Give a guess and then look at the next pictures and see if you're right. It's lots of fun.

The Double Cross

A Great American Mystery Story,
By Gilson Willets

Copyright 1910, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

SYNOPSIS

JOHN ST. JOHN, returning to the United States from Spain, receives, while the ship is in mid-ocean, a mysterious Marconigram. After reading the message he leaves it in his stateroom and goes out. Coming back a few minutes later, he finds a woman reading the Marconigram by the light of the moon through the port hole. Though the light is very dim, St. John believes he recognizes her as a beautiful girl whom he had often seen, but never spoken to, five years previously in the City of Mexico.

During the remainder of the voyage he is unable to find the mysterious lady, and the stewards refuse to give him any information. On his arrival in New York one of the stewards points out a lady as the one he seeks, but St. John is surprised to find that she is a blonde, while he is sure the woman who read his Marconigram was a decided brunette.

Going to the City of Mexico, according to the instructions given in the message, St. John is ushered into his father's old apartments in the Hotel Jardin, where he meets Senor Reyes, a lawyer, representing the trustee of his father's estate. The identity of this trustee is not revealed. Senor Reyes reads the will of the elder St. John, bequeathing the entire estate to his son John, upon one condition—that the latter agrees to marry the girl who shall appear to him bearing the sign of the cross on her right arm just below the shoulder. The lawyer is not permitted to tell St. John who the girl is. St. John signs a marriage contract without seeing the name of the woman he is to wed. Then he begins his search for the lady of the Double Cross.

He meets a beautiful, golden-haired woman walking in the Alameda and learns that she is known as the Golden Senorita. Her name is Alva Alvarado, and she is the ward of his father's friend, Leon Alvarado. She is reported to be engaged to the latter's son.

At his hotel St. John overhears a conversation regarding some mines in the Guanajuato district. Recognizing the voice of one of the speakers, he knocks at the door connecting his apartments with theirs, and is admitted. Learning that "Spot Cash" Royal and his friends purpose buying a mine belonging to Don Justino de Gastaneda, he decides to go to La Luz, where the mine is located. He has reason to believe that Don Justino's daughter Felipa will prove to be the mysterious lady of the steamer.

On his way from the railway station to Don Justino's hacienda, he meets Felipa, who saves him from death at the hands of a bandit. St. John kisses her and she threatens to kill him, but relents. He speaks to her of the Marconigram, but she denies all knowledge of it.

"I'LL prove that easily enough, senorita. Why do you feign ignorance of what I mean? You know me, of course, and so——"

"Know you, senor? I have never seen you before. I ask you again—who are you? Are you the Americano my father is expecting at the hacienda?"

"I am. And you know my name, too."

"Why of course I do—now. The President's telegram named you—the Senor Juan San Juan."

"Telegram from the President?"

"Yes, my father's friend—the President of Mexico. Surely you know that he telegraphed my father asking him to receive you?"

Thus I learned to whom I was indebted for my introduction to Don Justino. But why should the President himself vouch for me? Had the very head of the republic something to do with—the sign of the cross?

"John St. John," she murmured, as if to herself. "Strange! You look like Leon Alvarado."

"So people say. I never heard of him till a few days ago."

"Have you ever seen his ward—the Golden Senorita?"

"Yes. But I have never spoken to her."

"I wish I might meet her. They say she's amazingly lovely. And tell me, senor, have you seen the man whom, it is said, she will marry? Leon Alvarado's son?"

"Senorita," I said, "let us have done with this farce. We last met on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. I can appreciate your desire that I forget that particular meeting. But why, otherwise, do you deny acquaintance with me?"

A Puzzle

"Auguste Victoria?" she said, protestingly. "I never heard of that steamer."

"What? You were not on that boat—a month or so ago?"

"No, senor."

"Do you deny that you recently returned from Spain?"

"Is this the Inquisition, senor? No, I do not deny—I returned from Spain about five weeks ago. I came home on the Prinzessin Victoria Luise."

"You've confused the names, senorita. It was the Auguste Victoria. And then—what of the Alameda in Mexico City? You walked there—as I told you on the ship—with the other girls, five years ago every evening at the hour of the Angelus, while you were a pupil at the convent school."

"I walked in the Alameda, of course—I walk there now, whenever I am in the city, as everybody does in the cool hour of sunset. But I never attended the convent school in Mexico City."

Her very denial that she had been a pupil at the convent gave me light. She was the girl concerning whom some one in a high quarter had requested that no information be given. It was her name that had been omitted from the roster.

Yes, she was the girl of the convent. I was as sure of that now as that she was the woman of the steamer. And yet—was she really the woman of the steamer? She had not permitted me to turn up the light in the stateroom that night, and now there was a chance in a million that I might be mistaken. One sure mark of identification remained, however. Did she bear the sign of the cross? I would see—in time.

She was now, meantime, playing some game—what game? Reyes had said that she had a way of her own and a will of her own in doing things. Reyes was right. She had.

A Kiss-Stealers Fate

"Senorita," I said, starting toward the trail, "I will say adios now and go away."

I said this only to see what she would do.

"Impossible, Senor," was her astounding statement. "You are virtually a prisoner of my father's people, the Aztecs."

"How?"

"If Vallejo saw you take that kiss he will tell the Aztecs, who will deal to you the fate of the kiss-stealer of the Hotel Shao."

She lowered her voice as she added: "For three centuries the Aztecs of La Luz, of whom Vallejo is now the chief, have worked for the De Gastaneda family. Our honor is their pride. Should you attempt to fly now, Vallejo would flash word to the Aztecs and they would spring up about you as out of the ground. They would intercept your flight, compel you to account for that kiss. No, you cannot leave this region now. My lips were bait in a trap. You are caught."

"Happy captivity," I said. "May I never know freedom again, Felipa mia," I went on thus familiarly, as she led the way to Vallejo. "There is going to be trouble here, that is plain. All the same I shall win this game which you are compelling me to play—and you yourself will be the prize."

She looked at me again in wonderment.

"Listen to me, John St. John," she said, with sudden gravity. "That kiss—it cannot be lightly dismissed. It is in my mind, I must think. And you—you must let me manage this thing in my own way. Will you?"

"Oh, yes," I answered. "I've been told that you would insist upon putting this thing through by your own methods—original, unconventional, even daring."

"Who told you? That dreadful man—the Senor Tony? He tried to—oh——"

Once More the Sign

"Tony Terry. You call him Tony?"

"It is the custom in Mexico, senor, to address our guests by their first names—like your Quakers."

"Then you will call me—Jack?"

"Senor Juan—before the night is over I will plan a plan—for saving your life and my name. Will you then comply with my wishes?"

"Yes," I assented. "And we will win this game all right. Is it only a game with the Aztecs—or with—what? I say we'll win because—you will, at your own pleasure and in your own time and way, give me the sign you were going to give me on the steamer—the sign of the cross."

She stood still, grew pale, trembled from head to foot.

"What's the matter?" I cried, taking hold of her arm, purposely above the elbow.

With a shudder she wrenched her arm away—in a movement she might have made had I touched her arm with a red-hot branding iron.

"The sign of the cross!" she whispered, looking at me aghast. "What do you know of the cross?"

"Oh, very little. It is much more of a mystery to me than—to you. Yes?"

She turned her head away, regained her composure, then murmured:

"It is all a mystery to me, too—all."

"In the name of God, Felipa," I cried, "why do you pretend not to know me? Why do you not admit right now—and have done with all this mystery—that you are the woman trained and destined to be my mate? And that we are actually betrothed——"

"I suppose," she said with a smile that revealed two rows of wondrous teeth, "that it would be just as well to let the Aztecs think—that."

DRAWING A PENSION

THE widow of a German officer presented herself at the office in Berlin for the purpose of drawing the pension due to her. She handed in the necessary certificate from the Mayor of the village in which she lived, to the effect that she was still alive.

"This certificate is not correct," said the official in charge.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the lady.

"It bears the date October 21," was the stern reply, "and your pension was due on October 15."

"What kind of a certificate do you wish?" asked the disappointed applicant.

"We must have a certificate stating that you were alive on the fifteenth of October," said the official, with great firmness.

The California Limited

Society

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Now that the opera season is about to open all the box holders and subscribers, or at least the majority of them, have returned to town and are rested and ready for the fray. The coming Winter promises to be the busiest one socially that Boston has known in years, so in anticipation of this grand rush which begins with the opening of the opera, all the women and girls of the ultra smart set are devoting their time to milliners and modistes.

Among those who are settled at their Winter abodes are Mrs. John B. Silsbee, who spent the Summer at Beverly, and who is now at her town house on Marlboro street. Miss Katherine E. Silsbee will spend the greater part of the Winter at Beverly Cove.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cotting, who have been for the Summer at their West Manchester villa, are now at their town house on Marlboro street.

* * *

Mrs. Charles H. Dalton has come up from her Summer estate at Beverly Farms to her town house on Commonwealth avenue.

* * *

Miss Susan Preston, formerly of Commonwealth avenue, has come up to town from Cohasset and is now at Haddon Hall where she has taken apartments for the Winter.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sargent, who have been the guests of the former's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ellerton P. Whitney, in Milton, since closing their estate at Cohasset, are now at their apartment on Commonwealth avenue, having having sold their Gloucester street house to Walter Tufts.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn are occupying Mrs. Oscar Iasigi's house on Beacon street during the absence of Mrs. Iasigi and her daughter in Europe. Mr. Munn is completing his studies at Harvard this year, being a member of the senior class. The Munns have been on the North Shore the past season.

* * *

Mrs. Samuel G. Adams, who made a long season at her Summer home in Swampscott, has returned to her town house on Commonwealth avenue.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. James Dwight and the Misses Dorothy, Ruth and Elizabeth Dwight have returned to their Beacon street home after a long and delightful season at York Harbor.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George Herrick Billings have returned from their new Summer home at Marblehead and have opened their town house on Commonwealth avenue for the Winter.

* * *

Mrs. John Kingsbury Burgess and her daughter, Miss Barbara Burgess of Dedham, who have been traveling through Europe since early last May, have returned to their suburban home in Dedham.

* * *

Francis Shaw and his daughter, Miss Miriam Shaw, have returned to town and have opened their house on Beacon street for the Winter.

* * *

Other of the Beacon street residents just arrived in town are Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., and family, who since arriving from Scotland several weeks ago, have been occupying their suburban home at Westwood.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Noyes have opened their residence on Bay State road after a long season spent at the Flint Cottage on Marblehead Neck.

* * *

Herbert Sears and his daughters came up to town the past week from Woodrock, their Summer estate at Pride's Crossing. The George H. Lymans have also returned to town from their season at Beverly Farms.

* * *

The Misses Mary and Fanny Bartlett are again at their town house on Commonwealth avenue after a Summer spent in Europe. In addition to automobiling on the Continent they continued their journey to the North Cape and the Land of the Midnight Sun.

* * *

Benjamin Hyde and his sisters, the Misses Hyde have closed their Summer home at Cohasset and are again at their town house on Commonwealth avenue.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Higginson have come up from their Pride's Crossing estate and are at their residence on Beacon street for the Winter.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Perkins has closed her villa on West Beach, Beverly Farms and is at her apartment in Hotel Hamilton, Clarendon street, for the Winter.

Village Life

By ADA PATTERSON

THE Burgomaster of Hattersheim, desiring to promote peace in his town has established a black list. On this he orders placed the names of "litigious and quarrelsome people that house owners and lodgers may be warned against them." Perhaps you haven't heard of Hattersheim? It is a town of 2,000 inhabitants. The figures tell the story.

If the town had been larger the Burgomaster would have had no need to instruct his police to place on the sombre roll the names of "persons who concerned themselves with the business of others." Persons living in large towns don't. The city is the place of ingrowing interests.

Gossips stalk unveiled through small towns. No one ever denies this. There is no use. The dweller in the village has an overgrown interest in the affairs of his neighbors and friends and this interest comes near the point of exasperation at times. We are more annoyed because someone has espied a blue dimity gown on the Monday line and voiced her admiration than we would be by the calls of the vegetable man or the clang of the bell in the elevated train.

Intrusive gossip as a part of the village life is disturbing, but there is a reverse side of the subject. It is better to be disturbed by a friendly, though too inquisitive interest, than to be left forever unnoticed.

Neither Wish to "Intrude"

Fancy living in an apartment house for three years without once having speech with any person living beneath the same roof. The landlord who lives elsewhere, calls upon his agent to collect his rent. Your marketing, done by telephone, is rewarded by calls from a grocer boy with a full basket and an empty tongue, who lives elsewhere. Your washwoman, who lives elsewhere, shows faint signs of being human and comfortable, but she is worried and anxious to get home lest an automobile may run over one of her children. Even that taciturn misanthrope, the janitor, lives elsewhere, for he has charge of several houses, like the one in which you live. His views of mankind are depressing, and you are glad that he is stingy of speech.

But when you meet persons who live in the next apartment, who are so near that you can hear their voices by day and their footsteps by night, you don't salute them and they give you no greeting. Neither of you wishes to "intrude" and each is a little afraid the other may be an undesirable acquaintance. Some day you may meet in a downtown office or at an uptown dinner, be formally introduced to each other, frigidly acknowledge the introduction. Perhaps one of you will faintly refer to your having the same address. Probably neither of you will allude to that unimportant fact. Afterwards by the ethics of city life it is permissable for you to speak to each other, should you meet in the hall.

A woman, a famous writer, was crossing a street with me. She became suddenly ill and I called a cab and drove her to her home. When we reached the house where she lived, repeated ringing of the bell brought no answer. Everyone was away on a Sunday outing. The woman weighed nearly two hundred pounds. The cabman looked at me and I at the cabman. We doubted our strength to lift the swooning woman safely into her house and up one flight of stairs to her room.

On the doorstep of the next house sat an average city man, wearing average city clothes and an average city manner.

"Suppose you ask him to help you," I nodded toward the man. The cabman surveyed him and said:

"Maybe you'd have better luck than me."

Didn't Want to Mix

I went over and told the man of my friend's sudden illness and our plight. How did he answer? With a grave and stately "I will be glad to be of any service to you and the unfortunate lady," of the South? or the crisper "of course I'll help you" of the West? The average city man cast a bored look at the cab and the fainting woman inside.

"I don't want to be mixed up in it," he answered. A passing policeman solved the problem of help.

Yes, villages are "hotbeds of gossip," if by gossip we mean discussion of intimate details. But all gossip is not ill natured. There are sweet-tongued, golden-haired busybodies. These are keenly interested in Mary having changed the way she wears her hair, but they add how very becoming the new style is. They ferret out the fact that Matilda Brown is to marry Sam Smith two weeks before Miss Brown and Mr. Smith want the fact known, but they say that Matilda is a splendid housekeeper and Sam a good, steady fellow who will get on.

Better the friendly interest of these golden gossips than the absolute "let the aloneness" of the isolated city dweller.

Barley Water as Medicine.

A HUNDRED years ago barley water appears to have been regarded as a medicine. The author of the "Cook's Oracle," after giving a recipe for the preparation of barley water, adds that drinks of this character "are intended to assuage thirst in ardent fevers, and inflammatory disorders, for which plenty of mild diluting liquor is one of the principal remedies, and if not suggested by the medical attendant, is frequently demanded by honest instinct, in terms too plain to be misunderstood." "The stomach," he continues, "sympathizes with every fibre of the human frame, and no part of it can be distressed without in some degree offending the stomach; therefore it is of the utmost importance to soothe this grand organ, by rendering everything we offer to it as elegant and agreeable as the nature of the case will admit of; the barley drink will be received with pleasure by the most delicate palate."—London Chronicle.

No More Wrinkles
BEAUTIFUL BUST

Superfluous Hair Vanishes Like Magic by a New Discovery

Pimples and Blackheads Removed Forever

Let this woman send you, free, everything she agrees, and beautify your face and form quickly.

SHE LOOKS LIKE A GIRL OF 18

This clever woman has not a wrinkle upon her face; she has perfected a marvelous, simple method which brought a wonderful change in her face in a single night. For removing wrinkles and developing the bust, her method is truly wonderfully rapid.

She made herself the woman she is today and brought about the wonderful change in her appearance in a secret and pleasant manner. Her complexion is as clear and fair as that of a child. She turned her scrawny figure into a beautiful bust and well-developed form. She had thin, scrawny eyelashes and eyebrows, which could scarcely be seen, and she made them long, thick and beautiful by her own methods and removed every blackhead and pimple from her face in a single night.

You can imagine her joy, when by her own simple discovery, she removed every wrinkle from her face and developed her thin neck and form to beautiful proportions.

Nothing is taken into the stomach, no common massage, no harmful plasters, no worthless creams.

By her new process, she removes wrinkles and develops the whole figure plump and fat.

It is simply astonishing the hundreds of women who write in regarding the wonderful results from this new beauty treatment, which is beautifying their face and form after beauty doctors and other methods failed.

Mary Merritt, of Wis., writes, her wrinkles have entirely disappeared. Miss Hanson writes, her bust is beautifully developed and wrinkles gone. Mrs. Markham writes, her wrinkles vanished over night. Miss Alice Day writes, every blackhead and pimple has vanished forever.

The valuable new beauty book which Madame Cuningham is sending free to thousands of women is certainly a blessing to womankind, as it makes known her remarkable methods of beautifying the face and figure of unattractive women.

All our readers should write her at once and she will send you absolutely free all she agrees, and will show our readers how to remove wrinkles in 8 hours; how to develop the bust; how to make long, thick eyelashes and eyebrows; how to remove superfluous hair; how to remove blackheads, pimples and freckles; how to remove dark circles under the eyes; how to quickly remove double chin; how to build up sunken cheeks and add flesh to the body; how to darken gray hair and stop hair falling; how to stop forever perspiration odor.

Simply address your letter to Evelyn Cuningham, Suite 1011, 7 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill., and don't send any money, because particulars are free, as this charming woman is doing her utmost to benefit girls or women in need of secret information which will add to their beauty and make life sweeter and lovlier in every way.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

No matter what the situation may be, it is the sentiment of the Street that prices are to be higher, and on this theory the more conservative people in the Street advise traders to go with the trend, but at the same time to exercise caution.

$ $ $

If dividends are to be maintained it would not seem that the average of the list is too high now, and it must be said that there is nothing to indicate that the disbursements to stockholders are to be curtailed. So far as is known investors have no reason to feel at all worried. They are safe enough.

$ $ $

It will be observed that although the Smelting company is to be put in position where it can increase its dividend on the common stock, there is no promise of such an increase. The probabilities are that it will be some time before the dividend is advanced, and in the meantime the preferred stock will have the support of the strengthened condition of the company. As a 7 per cent issue it has been rather low, considering the level at which other stocks are quoted.

$ $ $

The remarkable strength of Steel is due, of course, to the certainty of immunity from punishment at the hands of the Federal Courts. But just now the buying is also due to a belief that after the election very large orders will come from the railroad companies. Some authorities say as much as 200,000 tons are ready for booking. The report of unfilled orders to be made next week will show a falling off from the previous month.

$ $ $

President N. C. Brown says: "Neither the New York Central nor the New York Central lines contemplate making any effort to dispose of any securities of any kind in the immediate future. The Michigan Central notes were sold on a basis of 4¾ per cent. net to Michigan Central. In other words, the Michigan Central secured 50,000,000 francs in Paris for one year at a net cost to that company of 4¾ per cent. Practically every engine and car owned by the various roads in the system is in service and they are short of equipment to fill orders."

$ $ $

Latest reports point to a very strong and active bull position planned by the Hawley interests in their stocks. Chesapeake & Ohio, Iowa Central, Toledo, St. Louis & Western, etc., should be closely watched by daily traders inclined to take a dive, according to those who are in close touch with the situation. The best buying, however, is said to be in Chesapeake & Ohio.

$ $ $

Northern Pacific holds remarkably strong considering its report for September, which was the worst issued this year by any American railroad. The reports have been showing net losses, but in nearly every instance the net loss came as the result of increased operating expenses, for there has been a uniform increase in gross. Northern Pacific showed a heavy reduction of gross receipts and the operating expenses were cut so as to make the showing less discouraging. The loss in Northern Pacific is easily explained by the failure of the Spring wheat crop, which has always furnished a large percentage of its business for September.

$ $ $

The last word in this bull movement is United States Steel common. It is relied upon to carry the others in the list up, and there is an element in the Street which firmly believes that this security will sell at par by the middle of January next. It is not the railroad shares upon which the Street proposes to rely for leadership, because it will be months yet before the railways will know where they stand, and yet the transportation lines will be important factors in the uplift of Steel, which is to be the savior of the market. All traders and investors look to it.

SLIGHT STOCK GAINS QUOTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Renewed activity appeared during the early trading in Wall street to-day, with the result that stocks in general were quoting fractional gains over yesterday's close. The upward trend was aided materially by demands for stocks in large volumes.

Railroad stocks were quoted fractionally higher under the leadership of Reading, which moved up ⅝, and Union Pacific, which advanced the same amount. Steel was strong, moving up to 81, but during a sharp reaction in the market fell back to 80⅝. Within the next half hour there was another decline, and Steel dropped back another half.

TURNS ON LIGHT; ELECTROCUTED

While turning on an electric light in a room in the Hotel Avon, at the corner of Eastern avenue and Lewis streets, Chelsea, where he was employed as a bartender, Daniel Herlihy was electrocuted. An investigation is being made by Medical Examiner Magrath and City Electrician Nutter. Herlihy was alone in the room. Mr. Magrath found the forefinger of the left hand burned to the bone.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

MOON ECLIPSE WILL BE VISIBLE HERE ON NOV. 16

The full moon will be obscured in an eclipse that will be clearly visible from this part of the world a week from next Wednesday, November 16.

Total eclipse will begin at 6:35 p. m., and last fifty-two minutes, or until 7:47 p. m. The moon will emerge from the shadow at 8:58 p. m. and from the penumbra at 9:56 p. m.

The time of greatest interest will be from 7 to 9 in the evening, when the moon will be high in the Eastern sky.

TRAPPERS SEE SEVERE WINTER

GREAT BARRINGTON, Nov. 5.—A long Winter of unusual severity is predicted by the Berkshire trappers. The furry tribe has already donned its Winter coat, and this, they say, points unmistakably to a prolonged siege of rigorous weather. Incidentally the trappers look forward to a prosperous season, which is already beginning to yield valuable fur.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

AMERICAN WANT "ADS" BRING QUICK RESULTS

MADE HAPPY BY MUTT AND JEFF

While New England was being storm swept and everyone had on a wet weather grouch there were several thousand happy people who refused to seem to be disgruntled. Why should they? They went home and took out of the book case their new Mutt and Jeff book and laughed for two good solid hours. The Mutt and Jeff book has even been recommended by physicians as a dispeller of that deep blue feeling and the inclement weather grouch. Many a man who went home last night wet and disgusted wished he had only thought and got that Mutt and Jeff book that he intended to buy. He was around bright and early to-day at the BOSTON AMERICAN Premium Department and with his set of seven coupons and 35 cents insured himself against another gloomy evening.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Florida grapefruit are becoming plentiful. Fine fruit is selling at three for a quarter and fancy fruit for ten cents and twelve cents each.

Notwithstanding the enormous quantities of apples that are being shipped to Europe the price keeps normal. Every ship that has sailed from Boston to English ports during the past few weeks has carried from 5,000 to 25,000 barrels of apples, and the ships to sail next week will all carry enormous quantities, yet fancy Baldwins sell for $3.50 and $4 a barrel, and other varieties at proportionate prices.

Butter is slowly mounting the scale of prices, notwithstanding the vast quantities in storage. The wholesale price has mounted from 31 cents to 33 cents during the past fortnight. For the first time in many months the New York butter markets quote prices as high, if not higher, than those in Boston. For a long time the New York quotations have been several cents below those of Boston, but the cold storage operators seem to have got a firmer grip on the market.

The receipts of cheese in the Boston markets have been very heavy during the past month and the price has lowered slightly under the onslaught. Fully 30,000 more boxes of cheese have been received this season than last year at this time.

In Chicago they say that the price of pork will soon be way down. They say that the farmers are so anxious to get in on the high prices that they are overdoing the hog raising and that prices will soon take a sudden drop on all pork products.

LOST AND FOUND

Diamond rings are pretty precious things to lose, and often times the loser finds it only after a long and tedious hunt. A simple remedy in all cases of lost articles of whatever description is a two or three-line ad. under this column telling in a brief way about the article lost. The real hunt is on the minute your ad. appears, and there will be no long waiting for the article to be returned.

Pianos and Musical Instruments.

AT THE
HENRY F. MILLER
PIANO WAREROOMS
395 BOYLSTON STREET

We offer a large and attractive stock of new and second-hand Grand, Upright and Player Pianos, of our own and other makes.

Each instrument is plainly marked at its lowest selling price—and we pledge our reputation that the marked price is the right price.

We employ no "canvassers" in our business, but sell direct to the Public from our warerooms. As nearly as we can find out, our prices are about $100 less than "canvassers" prices.

Nor do we occasionally pursue the above policy; but always, any day in the week, a child can buy of our warerooms as wisely as the expert.

We offer several lines of new pianos from reliable factories (not our own) at from $175 to $275, and on easy terms—$10 down and $5 per month. Having manufactured pianos ourselves for nearly 50 years, we are certainly qualified to procure for you the best possible pianos for the money you wish to invest—be the amount what it may. We would like you to compare the above pianos with those "canvassers" ask $300 to $400 for.

We believe the public are tired of the many insincere schemes used to sell pianos by, and will gladly trade with any reliable house that deals fairly and squarely by them, giving them exactly what is represented and at prices as equitable to the buyer as to the seller.

We are trying to fill that trust and would like to show you our offerings before you commit yourself to the "canvasser" or to a "scheme" that provides pianos for "half their worth."

HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO CO.

BARNARD'S ..$1.00.. PIANO PLAN
We will sell you any make piano $1.00 down and $1.00 a week. Get the other dealer's price first, if you like, then come to us and we will beat it. Send postal and we will give you something free. Open Monday, Thursday and Saturday evenings until 8 o'clock. Evenings, take elevator at 18 Boylston st. FRANK L. BARNARD, Piano Mfrs. Agent, 657 Washington st., cor. Legal and Public Notices.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS—Metropolitan Park Commission: Notice—Sealed proposals for furnishing tow boats to be used in breaking ice in the channels of the Charles River Basin will be received at the office of the Metropolitan Park Commission, 14 Beacon st., Boston, Mass., until 12 o'clock M. of Monday, Nov. 14, 1910, at which time and place the bids will be publicly opened and read. The boats shall be not less than 70 feet long, 18 foot beam, and shall have engines of not less than 250 horse power. The prices shall be quoted, one on a basis of 12 hours' continuous work and the other on a basis of 24 hours' continuous work, and the time shall be computed from the time the boat leaves the wharf until it returns to the wharf. The bidder will also be required to furnish evidence that he is able to substitute other boats of equal capacity in case of accident, either to the boat or machinery while in use. In case the machinery or boat breaks down, no compensation will be made for the time that the boat is unable to work. Boat must be sent to work within 4 hours' notice of the time it is required by the Superintendent at the Lock. In the employment of mechanics and laborers on the work to be done under this contract, preference shall be given to citizens of the Commonwealth, and, if they cannot be had in sufficient numbers then to citizens of the United States. (Chapter 411 of the Acts of 1891.) Neither the contractor nor his agents or employes shall, either directly or indirectly, require as a condition of the employment of any person that the employe shall lodge, board or trade at any particular place or with a particular person, but every employe shall lodge, board or trade where and with whom he elects. (Revised Laws, chapter 106, section 13.) No laborer, workman or mechanic working within this Commonwealth in the employ of the contractor, sub-contractor or other person doing or contracting to do the whole or a part of the work contemplated by the contract, shall be requested or required to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day. (Chapter 269 of the Acts of 1907.) The Commission reserves the right to reject any and all proposals, or to accept the proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth. WILLIAM B. DE LAS CASAS, EDWIN U. CURTIS, DAVID N. SKILLINGS, ELLERTON P. WHITNEY, EVERETT C. BENTON, Metropolitan Park Commission; JOHN R. RABLIN, Engineer.

NOTICE OF HEARING—To the Board of Street Commissioners of the City of Boston. Respectfully represents the Union Freight Railroad Company that it desires to make use of a certain tract of land on Commercial street, bordering on Charles River av., and to lay a track from its present main track to said land for access thereto; that by the use and development of said land the public convenience will be served, as your petitioner will be able to operate its trains with less obstruction to traffic in the streets of Boston than heretofore. Wherefore it respectfully requests that in addition to the rights heretofore granted it, it may have the right to lay down, maintain and use a curved track from its main line on Commercial street, nearly opposite Lime alley, so-called, and running to said tract of land near the easterly end thereof, as shown by red lines on plan herewith, entitled "Union Freight R. R. Proposed location of sidetrack connection in Commercial St., Boston, Mass., September 27th, 1910." UNION FREIGHT RAILROAD COMPANY, by its Attorney, F. A. FARNHAM.

CITY OF BOSTON, In Board of Street Commissioners, Nov. 1, 1910.—Upon the foregoing petition, it is hereby Ordered, that 14 days' notice be given by the petitioner to all parties interested that this Board will, on Tuesday, the 22d day of November, at 11 o'clock a. m., take into consideration the expediency of granting the prayer of the above petition when any parties who object thereto may appear and be heard. Said notice is to be given by publication of a copy of said petition and this order thereon in the Boston Globe, Boston Journal, Boston American. Passed. J. J. O'CALLAGHAN, Secretary. A true copy. Attest: J. J. O'CALLAGHAN, Secretary.

COMMISSION HEARING—The commission to investigate the increase of criminals, mental defectives, epileptics and degenerates, will hold a public hearing on Thursday, Nov. 10, 1910, at 10:30 a. m., in room 147, State House, Boston, Mass., to consider so much of its inquiry as relates to criminals and crime; all persons wishing to be heard in this matter are invited to be present. E. V. SCRIBNER, Secretary.

NOV. 5, 1910—On and after this date the partnership now existing between Medric H. Lanctot and Clarence V. Burrage, doing business under the name of Acme Roofing & Repairing Company, is dissolved by mutual consent. MEDRIC H. LANCTOT, CLARENCE V. BURRAGE.

NOTICE—On and after this date, Nov. 5, 1910, I will not be responsible for any bills contracted by my wife, Mrs. Katherine E. Crittenden. MR. GEO. A. CRITTENDEN.

A FEW PEOPLE DON'T USE AMERICAN WANT ADS

For the same reason that modern methods were once scoffed at by our forefathers, yet, in spite of prejudice, progress has its way. The successful majority employ the "WANT AD WAY" to secure tenants, or buyers, or help, or employment. They employ the AMERICAN, realizing that it is the only paper which will carry their message to nearly all of the people.

SACRIFICE PIANO SALE

$5 Down
$1 A Week

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public knows, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes to the Storage Salesrooms in DUE TIME, a sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' "Expense percentage" basis and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices.

Delivered free anywhere in unmarked wagons.

Massachusetts and Her Duty to the Nation

Both Will Benefit by the Defeat of Lodge and Draper

It Is for the Voters to Say on Next Tuesday Whether They Wish to Continue a Government by Agents of Special Privilege. —Foss's Election Will Mean the Retirement of Lodge!

A political campaign that has been one of the most impressive in the history of Massachusetts is drawing to a close.

The result will have a most important effect, not only upon the government of the State of Massachusetts, but upon the conduct of the national Congress.

It is for the voters to say on next Tuesday whether they favor a return of government by the people or a continuance of government by the agents of Special Privilege.

During this campaign, the Boston American, in its news columns, has presented both the Democratic and the Republican points of view, as outlined by candidates and speakers of those parties.

Editorially, this newspaper has advocated the election of Foss and Cassidy and has urged the necessity of preventing the re-election of Henry Cabot Lodge to the United States Senate.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM IS ONE OF PROGRESS. It demands legislation in the interests of the people. That is one reason why the American has been so generous in its support of the Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor and most of the Democratic candidates for Congress and the State Legislature.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM DOES NOT HOLD FORTH A SINGLE PROMISE FOR THE REFORM OF EXISTING POLITICAL EVILS. It is ultra-conservative in its nature; it is insolently stand-pat in its tenor; it is reactionary in its attitude on vital issues.

Senator Lodge inspired that platform. Governor Draper and Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham are tied hand and foot to its planks.

THE GREATEST ISSUE BEFORE THE PEOPLE TO-DAY IS THE HIGH COST OF LIVING. This issue is not confined to Massachusetts. It spreads over the whole country. We support the Democratic theory that the tariff is largely to blame for high prices.

The Republicans insist that the tariff is not an issue. They deny that the tariff has created monopolies and trusts. They maintain that the Republican party, which is responsible for the tariff, is in no way responsible for the high prices which the people are paying to-day for their food, their shelter and their clothing.

They blame the increased gold supply of the world for high prices. What puzzles most of us is why we have not more of that gold which they say is so plentiful. They fail to tell us why we have not received some of it through increased wages. They have gone so far as to say that the cost of living is not high· "under the circumstances," and even have been so foolish as to refer to the "supposed high cost of living."

There is no "supposed high cost of living." IT IS A REAL THING THAT IS PINCHING THE PEOPLE. It is a real thing that is taking all the money out of the pay envelope to meet the expenses of the home. It is a real thing—high prices—that has put the comforts and the luxuries of life beyond the reach of any but the rich.

Foss and Cassidy argue that the defeat of Draper would be such a protest against Lodge and all he stands for that it would help the people's cause in Congress. We believe that to be true.

THE ELECTION OF FOSS WOULD ALSO HAVE A GREAT DEAL OF INFLUENCE ON THE ACTION OF THE LEGISLATURE, AND MIGHT BE STRONG ENOUGH TO RETIRE LODGE.

It must not be forgotten that one of the strongest indictments against Mr. Draper is that he tried to open up the savings banks of the thrifty people of Massachusetts to a railroad corporation.

That was stopped by the American, by other newspapers and by the banking interests who finally rose up in arms and killed the measure.

Nothwithstanding the defeat of the measure, Mr. Draper must be taught by the voters that he cannot trifle with people's savings.

Draper opposed an income tax on the ground that it would be an injustice to the rich; he is opposed to home rule for Boston; he shifted and shuffled on the milk rates question, trying to play all sides for his own political benefit; he is opposed to the popular election of United States Senators; he has done nothing to promote taxation reforms; he has been unfriendly to labor and over-friendly to railroads seeking special legislation.

Taxpayers, who believe that there is more need of a Finance Commission for the investigation of State departments than there ever was for the investigation of a municipality, know that they must turn the Republicans out of power if thorough investigations are to be made and abuses corrected.

Besides defeating Draper and Frothingham, the voters have another duty. They should do everything in their power to prevent the re-election of the men who voted to keep Speaker Cannon in power in Congress.

We urge every reader to vote against the re-election of Congressmen Lawrence, Gillett, Washburn, Roberts, McCall, Keliher, Peters, Weeks and Greene, because they were Cannon men. Because they supported the Paine-Aldrich tariff bill, Congressmen Gardner and Ames should be defeated.

Because they are real Progressives, John J. Mitchell in the Fourth District and Thomas Thacher in the Fourteenth District should be elected to Congress.

We urge especially that Keliher in the Ninth District and Peters in the Eleventh be marked for defeat. They betrayed their party as well as the people's interests.

EDITED BY · EDWIN MARKHAM

EDWIN · MARKHAM

"THE House on Stilts," by Mr. R. H. Hazard, may claim a curious new setting. The story is located upon the tropical island of Gabrielle, which in the last chapter sinks spectacularly beneath the sea in a volcanic cataclysm. But Gabrielle's final weeks were full of excitement; for a ubiquitous and well-nigh omnipotent young reporter was then and there engaged in baffling the sorceries of the Yellow Queen of the fated island, matching her Voodoo rites with his various vaudeville-like performances, which were equally impressive to the natives.

For an event-crowded yarn, for a story that has the seeming of a busy, dizzy dream that asks you not to reason, but only to hurry on from one searehead situation to another, here is your book.

(G. W. DDillingham Co., Publishers, New York. $1.)

Mr. Alonzo L. Rice's 'Sun-Ways of Song.'

THIS is Mr. Rice's first harvesting in the field of the muses. The poems show a strong love of Nature in her changing moods. Mr. Rice does his best work in the sonnet form; and "A Dead Bee" is one of the best sonnets in the volume. But I content myself with quoting the following as an example of Mr. Rice's fine moral energy:

"THE INDOMITABLE WILL."

Here on the height is reared my last redoubt,
With flag unfurled in mute defiance; foes
In awful tumult soon will round it close,
And there will rise the far-resounding shout
Of thronging victors; but through utter rout
Of fondest hopes a heart that never knows
Aught of alarm will anticipate their blows.
And death with ready hand will measure out.
And when the foremost foe will scale the wall
(For I must fall against such frightful odds)
I will not shrink, but meet the blows that fall
With heart undaunted. Not the mighty gods
Can make me play a coward's part, though all
Are fully armed with thunder-smiting rods!

(Sherman, French & Co., Publishers, Boston, Mass. $1.)

A New and Cheaper Edition of Ambrose Bierce's Works.

SOME months ago I announced in these columns that Mr. Bierce's works were in course of publication in ten volumes at $10 a volume. A cheaper edition is now announced. It is to be like the first, save for the binding, which is cloth instead of leather, while the edges are gilded at the top only—not all around. Nor will the autograph of the author be in the new edition. With these exceptions, it will be like the first edition.

The ten volumes of the new edition will be sold for $25 net, payable $2.50 a volume as delivered. Three volumes are now ready; the fourth volume will be ready November 1. After that date two volumes will be issued yearly, one in the Spring and one in the Fall, until the ten volumes have been published. No subscription taken for fewer than the complete set.

The volumes are issued in excellent print, paper and binding.

A Book Valuable for Mothers

DR. FRANCIS H. MACCARTHY has prepared an interesting, easily-understandable treatise called "Hygiene for Mother and Child." The book wisely lays stress upon prevention rather than upon remedy.

Dr. MacCarthy is the attending physician to the out-patient department for children of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital, and from this wide and varying experience he has been able to survey broadly the field of the child's pains and panaceas.

His work will be a helpful volume in any household as a reminder to the experienced mother, and as a counsellor to the mother just learning to shape and strengthen young lives.

(Harper & Brothers, Publishers, New York, $1.25.)

A Story That Keeps Us Guessing

MR. E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM'S new "The Illustrious Prince," open with the catchiness that this voluminous and versatile tale-teller knows so well how to get between covers.

The liner Lusitania, due in London in the evening, just misses the tide. Passengers are told that no one can land till next day. All the hundreds of grumbling travellers (save one man) accept the inevitable. This man seeks the captain and shows him a certain note, whereupon the captain, deeply impressed, orders that the bearer of this note be immediately taken ashore in a special tug.

Upon landing, the mysterious man finds that no train goes to London for two hours. He asks for a special. The station master says that would disorganize all connections for the night and that it cannot be given him. Again he shows his note. Presto, the station master, like the captain, withdraws all objection, and in just twenty-two minutes he is given a train and the freedom of the road to London!

Who was this personage? What was his mission? I have given the synopsis of only one chapter. The other twenty-three chapters will cheerfully answer your questions.

THE ILLUSTRIOUS PRINCE. By E. Phillips Oppenheim, Little Brown & Co., Publishers. Boston, Mass. $1.50.

The Health of the City

AS this volume came to hand came with it a newspaper stating that a physician had appeared before the Council of one of our cities and informed the authorities that fifty per cent. of the cows furnishing the city's supply of milk were tuberculous.

The physician went on to state several other features at a long remove from sanitary conditions, but the first item of the count was enough to suggest the timeliness of Mr. Godfrey's last book.

Well known for years in the scientific world, the author has for some time past made a study of matters concerning city health. The result of his investigation with city air, water, milk, food, ice, noise, waste plumbing and housing goes to the making of the present graphic non-technical but scientific report criticism and advice.

While to the student of economy and sociology the book will prove of much use, it is of special importance to the physicians and to the inhabitants, one and all, of our large communities.

Such matters rest, at last, with the people, and certain of them—grewsome enough, as herein set forth—should rouse them from their fatal lethargy.

"It is but a year or two ago," writes Mr. Godfrey, "that the newspapers considered briefly the dangers of that bacterial paradise, the Pullman sleeping car. A brief spasm of remonstrance passed over the country and disappeared as suddenly as it came."

Instances of the sort could be many times multiplied. Some encouragement, however, is to be taken from the active and beneficent interest of individuals here and there, of clubs and societies devoted to the great cause of city sanitation. Our cities can be made healthful, and they will be made so when the country has suffered enough and the evils are grown too heavy longer to be borne.

"For the smoke nuisance, the dust evil and the dark dwelling the city can provide remedies. It is all in the city's hands."

Such is the position. It is a new question of securing rights and privileges which are a common possession.

Mr. Godfrey, assisted by several specialists, has made a valuable contribution to the cause of civic betterment. It will be heartily welcomed by every citizen with a live spark of care in him for the common good.

Recent Orations on Lincoln.

NATHAN WILLIAM MACCHESNEY has done a service in gathering together in permanent form the body of the memorial tributes to Abraham Lincoln in America and Europe at the centenary last year, together with illustrations of the marbles and bronzes of the occasion. Although he publishes in this handsome volume over fifty fine addresses, he tells us that he has still in his library hundreds of unused speeches and over sixty thousand clippings with reference to the celebration.

It is to be hoped that some publisher or some library will save this large remnant for posterity, to show how America honored herself in 1909 by honoring her most ideal statesman.

'And There Came a Voice'

HERBERT N. CASSON, author of "The Romance of Steel" and "The Romance of the Reaper," now presents "The History of the Telephone." Mr. Casson is the Macaulay of industrialism. He summons his facts from every province of history and science; he marches them in file and phalanx; he charges with them, he deploys. They arrest your attention; they command your interest; they force your judgment.

Telephony is only thirty-five years old, but seven million telephones are threaded across America; and we cannot understand how men ever lived without this extension of their voice. Mr. Casson tells of the hoots and hisses that assailed the early days of the telephone, and of the men whose vision conceived and perfected the details that make this almost human mechanism. He says that the marvels of telephony are not all accomplished yet; seeing that the Bell system alone has three hundred experts at work on new ideas.

Father Tabb's Last Poems

"LATER POEMS" is the title of a slender booklet by the late John Banister Tabb. Father Tabb had a curious, carefully perfected style. His themes are mostly quaint and pleasant fancies, rarely rising to the heights of imagination; and his sentiment seldom burns warmer than the flicker of altar candles. The lines that have the strongest glow of feeling are those touching upon the blindness which afflicted the latter days of the life of this poet-priest.

Here is one of his best, which is entitled "Going Blind." It shows his power of condensation and his crystal clearness:

Back to the primal gloom
Where life began,
As to my mother's womb,
Must I, a man,
Return—
Not so be born again,
But to remain,
And in the school of Darkness learn
What mean
"The things unseen."

Crime and Criminals

THE Prison Reform League has issued a small volume, dedicated to Tolstoy, on crime and the treatment of criminals. Parts are gathered from governmental and official reports, and from distinguished writers, and from these deductions are made, more particularly for writers and speakers, who it is hoped will greatly extend their publicity.

Starting out with the discouraging premise that violent crime, especially among youthful offenders, is on the increase, the old school of treatment of criminals is examined and severely condemned, and a plea made for the adoption of more enlightened methods.
